BUTLER TRIAL OFF; GETS REPRIMAND

20 MAROONED MEN FOUND ON FLOE BY PLANE

Coast Guard Boats Fight Way Through Frigid Erie to Party.

CAN OF HOT COFFEE DROPPED TO GROUP

First of Rescued Fishermen Tells of Facing Death on Isle of Ice.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—An airplane, swinging low out of leaden skies, brought a message of life today to 19 fishermen and a 9-year-old boy, who for almost 36 hours faced freezing death by exposure, hunger or drowning on a drifting ice floe in the choppy, wind-swept waters of Lake Erie.

Early tonight, the boy and four of the men had found warmth, shelter and food on shore, thanks to the heroic rescue efforts of Coast Guard seamen. The others, their sobbing vitality and deadened hopes revived by the knowledge that help was near, kept up their icy vigil while a small boat (a larger one could not be used) struggled through miles of thick slush ice and open water to bring more of the marooned men to shore.

Five hours were required for a single trip on which only five persons could be carried to safety and a long night of battle with cold and ice faced the rescuers before they could rest in the satisfaction of a heroic job well done.

Surrounded by Water.

The drifting fishermen were located by the plane, chartered by the Buffalo Courier-Express, 5 miles out from shore and about 18 miles south of Buffalo. All morning the plane had searched in vain for sight of the stranded men. Their floating island of ice was surrounded by a strip of water a mile wide.

Then the pitiful crew was found. The plane swept low over the ice floe, dropping notes. Pike poles in eager hands spelled frantic words upon the surface of the ice. The plane turned and again swept low over the floe. From it dropped a huge can, a parachute attached to it opened and the can, filled with steaming hot coffee, settled near the men.

The plane sped back to shore and fishermen settled down to wait through the long cold hours before all could be brought to safety.

The rescue boat was forced to struggle through 2 miles of ice slush and then across a mile and a half of open, choppy water to the floe on which the men waited for deliverance. Then the long struggle back to shore.

Ice Floes Are Scanned.

All over the eastern end of Lake Erie, fishermen were plying their trade this morning when the plane began its search. One group after another was scanned by the men in the plane, but in each case a circle around the section of ice on which they were fishing showed that they could reach land without difficulty.

Finally the marooned men were found, cut off from the solid ice by water still tossing fiercely after the all-day blizzard which swept the lake yesterday. A frantic waving of arms assured the fliers these were the men they sought. Men rushed to collect bits of wood. Circling above them the fliers read the thought which was uppermost in the minds of these men who had lived through 36 hours of horror. Just one word: "Eat."

Then another word-picture formed upon the ice: "Help."

And finally: "Charcoal."

In those three words, the fliers read a serial story of the hours of anxious waiting. Hunger first, as yesterday wore on and meal times passed without food. Darkness set-

Liberty Is Restored To Spain by Alfonso

Royal Decree Announces Parliamentary Elections Next Month.

Madrid, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—After more than seven years of dictatorship, constitutional guarantees were restored to Spanish subjects today by a royal proclamation which calls for parliamentary elections in March.

The guarantees and parliamentary elections were suspended by the dictatorship of the late Miguel Primo de Rivera September 23, 1923. Despite the dictator's frequent promises to return Spain to a constitutional government, this was not done until today.

Gen. Damasco Berenguer, who succeeded Primo de Rivera as dictator more than a year ago, had continued the suspension last year, which saw a series of labor, political and radical disturbances in the country.

Today's action of King Alfonso was viewed in some quarters as a testimony of complete confidence in Berenguer's work.

JEWRY ADOPTS LAND PLAN FOR PALESTINE

Drive to Raise $2,500,000 Is Approved by National Zionist Body.

PRESENT RULE SCORED

A definite program for acquisition of land in Palestine was adopted yesterday by the National Conference of the Jewish National Fund of America and by the National Advisory Council of the Zionist Organization of America.

The National Conference adopted a resolution indorsing a five-year Palestine land reclamation program, which was outlined by Menahem Ussishkin, president of the Jewish National Fund of Jerusalem. The National Advisory Council approved a drive to raise $2,500,000 to meet "urgent" financial needs in connection with Jewish reconstruction activities in Palestine, to be secured between now and July 1.

Under the five-year plan, Jewish communities of America will be linked with workers in Palestine in acquisition of important tracts of land, its was announced. Such a program is imperative, it was declared. The resolutions recommend that special groups of National Fund workers, to be known as Keren Kayemeth Leagues, be formed to gather the necessary funds.

Each league will have as its object the redemption of a specific tract of land in Erotz Israel. The tract of land redeemed will bear the name of the American community represented by the particular league. Recommendation is made that the funds be obtained by subscription from individuals and groups for definite areas "to be redeemed and reclaimed as the inalienable possession of the Jewish people."

The proposed reclamation program will include a memorial in Palestine to Nathan Strauss, famous Jewish leader, who died recently.

The recommended project will not conflict with the Jewish Agency Campaign, it was announced.

The National Advisory Council approved the $2,500,000 drive after an address was heard from Robert Szold, chairman of administration of the Zionist Organization in America, in which he declared that Zionists in this country are insistent upon a

LEADERS TO FORCE SESSION SHOWDOWN

Adoption of Compromise on Relief First Hurdle to Be Conquered.

G. O. P. TO CONFER TODAY

(Associated Press.)

Congressional leaders determined yesterday to force a showdown this week on the necessity for an extra session.

Adoption of the compromise on relief legislation is the first hurdle in the way of the March 4 adjournment. Both Republican and Democratic leaders believed they would pass over it safely.

A compromise on veterans' compensation allowances is the second big stumbling block. Conferences will be resumed today looking to a solution.

The relief compromise, providing for a $20,000,000 drought loan fund for "agricultural rehabilitation," in place of the disputed $25,000,000 Red Cross appropriation, will be called up in the Senate today.

Revolt against the agreement broke out Saturday in the ranks of the Senate coalition, which originally sponsored the Red Cross appropriation. A sharp contest is in prospect.

However, both Senators Robinson and Caraway (Arkansas), who led the Democratic drive for relief, have approved the compromise, along with administration leaders. They believe its adoption is assured, although considerable debate is in store and only three weeks remain of the session.

If the end of the week shows any determined effort to force an extra session, the congressional chieftains are prepared to resort to drastic action to assure passage of the vital appropriation bills. This is necessary to avert an extra meeting.

Senator Watson (Indiana), Republican leader, has called a party conference for today to get his forces in agreement on a program for the remaining three weeks.

Adoption of the relief compromise is expected to open the way for final disposition of the appropriation bills which have piled up during the controversy over drought aid.

The Interior Department bill itself, in which the compromise on drought relief is incorporated, carries more than $25,000,000, to become available immediately for public

Hoover Occupies Same Pew Used by Lincoln During War

President Hears Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo Leading Services at Which Emancipator Is Praised; Decadence of Moral Realm Scored.

President Hoover gave over his weekly custom of attending religious services at the Friends' Meeting House yesterday to worship in the church Abraham Lincoln attended during the Civil War era.

The present Chief Executive sat in the same pew used by Lincoln and heard the Great Emancipator described by Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, extolled as one who lived in a "darkening world, politically, intellectually and spiritually," but who "brought men back to a faith in God," and a new sense of compassion.

Dr. Sizoo deplored the decadence in spiritual, economic and moral realms. The lost radiance of the world might be returned through faith and compassion, he asserted.

"Stories of smut and lies," he declared, "are glossed over and tossed off as life. Moral literature is going as stale as it is sour," the pastor said, and portrayed the spiritual life of the world as having made a costly sacrifice to secularism.

"Two-thirds of the people of the world are going to bed hungry tonight," Dr. Sizoo declared.

ACCUSER HOLDS CANNON FINDING WAS 'BLUNDER'

Authors of Charges Still Sure They Are Right in Bishop's Case.

CLERIC'S ADMISSIONS CALLED ASTONISHING

Prelate Prepares to Take Up Church Duties as His Health Permits.

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, jr., yesterday stood cleared of charges brought against him by four ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, but at least one of the accusing churchmen believes the result "a blunder."

As the militant prohibition leader prepared to resume his church activities as son as his health permits, Dr. Costen J. Harrell, one of the four who filed the charges, said they were "doubly sure" they were right after hearing the evidence.

Mr. Harrell, a Richmond (Va.) pastor, said the evidence included "some very astonishing admissions by Bishop Cannon."

Finding Held Blunder.

"The committee did not vote with us," he added, "but time will doubtless reveal their blunder."

His statement, issued at Richmond, explained the four had filed the charges "after very careful investigation" and "for the cause of righteousness and for the church."

Informed of the statement, Bishop Cannon said he had no comment.

The militant prohibition leader spent the Sabbath in Sibley Hospital contemplating the decision of twelve clergymen last night that charges filed against him by the four ministers did not have sufficient weight to justify a trial before the 1934 general conference of the church.

Is Second Triumph.

It was the second time within a year that Bishop Cannon has emerged triumphant from accusations emanating from within his own church. The first time was at the general conference last year in Dallas, when he was accused of gambling in stocks.

Bishop Cannon has been ill for weeks with arthritis and has been undergoing treatment at Sibley Hospital and at a Marlin, Tex., sanitarium. As soon as he improves sufficiently he plans to take up his duties as head of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service as missionary bishop to Africa and Brazil.

The decision Saturday night was reached after a five days' investigation behind the locked and guarded doors of the Mount Vernon Place Church.

Defense Is Permitted.

For three days Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, of Baltimore; Dr. I. P. Martin, of Abingdon, Va., and Drs. Costen J. Harrell and J. T. Mastin, of Richmond, Va., the four ministers who brought charges, presented their case. For two days Bishop Cannon defended himself, assisted materially by Dr. J. Sidney Peters, of Newport News, Va., and Dr. James Cannon, 3rd., the Bishop's eldest son, a professor at Duke University, Durham, N. C.

Because of the gravity of the charges, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of

HOUSE LEADERS TO SHELVE NAVY BUILDING PLANS

Decide to Hold Up Bill for Present to Obviate Extra Session.

WILL PUSH MEASURE TO MODERNIZE SHIPS

Fight on Proposal Expected; Appropriations Will Be Debated Today.

(Associated Press.)

Plans for passage this session of the administration's $74,000,000 naval construction program have been abandoned.

This decision has been reached by House leaders in the interests of economy and to obviate any possibility of a special session. The program was the first advanced since the London treaty was ratified.

An effort will be made, however, to bring to a House vote the Senate bill to authorize $30,000,000 for modernization of the battle ships New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho. The administration is represented as favoring this authorization so $3,000,000 to begin the work can be included in the second deficiency bill.

Allowed by 1922 Treaty.

Modernization of the vessels would complete work allowed by the 1922 Washington treaty and make the Nation's fifteen battleships as modern as possible without being reconstructed from the keel up.

Meanwhile, the House planned to take up today the annual naval appropriation bill with a view to quick action. That would clear the House calendar of supply bills with the exception of the second deficiency measure which is still in committee.

The administration's naval construction program called for an expenditure of $90,000,000. The House naval committee, however, disallowed $16,000,000 for a 6-inch gun cruiser.

The measure now carries $27,550,000 for an airplane carrier with 114 planes, $20,780,000 for a cruiser with a landing deck and 36 airplanes, $17,000,000 for four submarines, $5,000,000 for -30 planes and $3,000,000 for experimentation with Diesel engines.

Modernization Fight Seen.

The decision to abandon action this session will postpone consideration until next December.

Proponents of the modernization program are expecting vigorous opposition from representatives who feel money should not be spent on vessels they believe obsolescent. In asking for legislative right-of-way for the

Bolivian Envoy Loses Liquor, Cash to Thief

Two bottles of champagne and three bottles of Bourbon whisky were among the loot pilfered from the apartment of Senor Don George de la Barra, First Secretary of the Bolivian Legation, in the last two weeks, he told police yesterday. He resides in the Wardman Park Hotel.

Senor de la Barra named a suspect. He valued the total loss at $82. Other articles missed in addition to the liquors are gold coins, a small amount of other money, an eight-day clock and a string of imitation pearls.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

Few of us realize how vast and intricate the organization of modern life becomes. Most of it is private and voluntary, authorized, supervised and taxed by the Government but without any official connection.

The most complete system is the government which furnishes public utilities, education, order and justice. The largest investments are in transportation. Great lines of communication cover the land and reach under the sea. The news services bring in hourly the important transactions all over the earth to be distributed with equal rapidity.

Merchandising is carried on by hundreds of thousands of small concerns but within a bond of interrelationship and many common sources of supply. Economic life has become organized into a wide system of production, distribution, marketing and consumption. Competition in all fields is apparent, yet the necessity for cooperation and coordination is steadily enlarged.

With life so complicated it is little wonder that from time to time, through the dislocation of some part, the whole organism is thrown out of adjustment. Our economic depression does not prove our system unsound, but only indicates that we need more mental and moral power to keep all parts in harmonious relationship.

SCHALL OPENS NEW FIGHT ON MITCHELL

Senator Says Corporation Connection Influences Attorney General.

BATTLE OVER JUDGESHIPS

(Associated Press.)

Declining to accept President Hoover's word as final, Senator Schall issued a statement yesterday renewing his attack on Attorney General Mitchell and continuing his advocacy of Ernest Michel for a Federal judgeship in Minnesota.

The President late last week stepped into the protracted controversy between Senator Schall, a Minnesota Republican, and the Attorney General, a Minnesota Democrat, with a suggestion that the senator withdraw the name of his candidate and submit a list of eight or ten "fit appointees."

In his statement yesterday Senator Schall charged Mr. Mitchell was influenced by corporations with which, he said, the Attorney General had been connected in the past.

"In my answer to President Hoover's letter," the senator said, "I intend to call to the attention of the President some of the former corporation conections of his Attorney General, with the hope that the President will realize that the Attorney General's actions are warped by his corporation-public-utility feeling

U. S. EMPLOYE ENDS LIFE BY INHALING GAS

Coast Guard Finance Bureau Chief Was Despondent Over Ill Health.

FOUND SITTING AT STOVE

Elva Leroy Hutchison, 55 years old, chief of the Finance Bureau of the United States Coast Guard, ended his life early yesterday by inhaling gas in the kitchen of his home on Quebec place near Park place northwest. He was found by members of his family sitting before a gas stove with his head in the oven. All the jets on the range were open.

According to his son, Jean C. Hutchison, Mr. Hutchison had been despondent for some time due to ill health. However, he appeared to be in good spirits when he retired Saturday night, and the suicide was not discovered until shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday when his wife awakened and found he was not in bed. She aroused other members of the family and, guided by the odor of gas, they found him in an unconscious condition at the kitchen stove.

The Fire Rescue Squad was summoned, but despite their efforts to revive him, he was pronounced dead by a doctor from Emergency Hospital. Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Mr. Hutchison had been in the service of the United States Coast Guard for more than 25 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Maude Hutchison, and two sons, Jean C. and Lee Roy Hutchison.

Thousands of Jobs Begging As Soviet Turns to Women

Government Looks to Female Workers to Solve Labor Scarcity Problem; Plans Nurseries to Care for Children as Mothers Toil.

Moscow, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Employment of hundreds of thousands of women in industries to overcome the present shortage of labor, is being considered by the government of the Soviet Union.

With thousands of jobs for which there are no takers, the country today has the greatest shortage of labor in its history. Millions of women are inactive and it is believed the problem can be solved by pressing them into service. The children would be cared for by the state while their mothers are working.

"The problem of attracting hundreds of thousands of women to industrial labor is acute," said an official announcement. "In order to solve this problem as painlessly as possible the government, together with trade unions and other social organizations, has elaborated a number of measures directed toward freeing women from domestic work and securing children with the necessary care while the mothers are at work.

"The most important measures in this respect are the opening of a great number of new nurseries, extension of

INCIDENT ENDS AS PRINCIPALS HOLD MEETING

Butler Writes Letter of Regret for Causing Embarrassment.

ASSERTS HIS HEARERS PLEDGED TO SECRECY

Adams Dictates Reproof After Conference in Naval Office.

CONDEMNS TALK OF FIERY MARINE CHIEF

Court-Martial Dissolved in Order; General Reported Well Satisfied.

(By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.
(Copyright, 1931, by The Washington Post.)

The trial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler has been called off.

The fiery Marine Corps officer, who was to face a general court-martial in Philadelphia a week from today for calling Premier Mussolini, of Italy a hit-and-run driver, yesterday turned over to Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams a statement in which he said that he greatly regretted the incident.

Whereupon, Secretary Adams called off the court-martial and administered a stinging rebuke to Gen. Butler. As a result, what has become known as the Butler-Mussolini incident may now be considered closed.

Saves Further Embarrassment.

Friends of Gen. Butler have argued that a reprimand should have been administered in the first place. That, they say, would have ended the incident. A court-martial, they felt, could only result in further embarrassment to the two countries—the United States and Italy.

These friends of Gen. Butler say that they know for a fact that Secretary of the Navy Adams was not in favor of a court-martial. They say, further, that it was President Hoover himself who ordered the court-martial.

At any rate, President Hoover last week was bombarded with letters, telegrams and petitions urging him to call off the courtmartial of Gen. Butler.

Arrangement Appears Evident.

The big question last night was, Who brought about the arrangement whereby the courtmartial was avoided? That there was an arrangement is palpably evident. On the first place, the whole thing took place on the Sabbath, a day on which official business is rarely transacted.

In the second place, both the letter of Gen. Butler and the letter of Secretary Adams were dated February 8, which was yesterday. Certainly, a letter from Gen. Butler could not have traveled from Quantico to Washington that fast.

Here is the inside on the whole transaction:

Last Friday, an emissary of the Hoover administration approached Gen. Butler and his counsel and solving what threatened to be an embarrassing preblem, the problem, of course, being the proposed court-martial in Philadelphia.

Butler Here Yesterday.

Yesterday, Gen. Butler came to Washington. With him was Maj. Henry Leonard, U. S. M. C., retired, his counsel; Lieut. Col. James P. Dyer, of the Marine Corps, an associate counsel, and da representative of Roland S. Morris, of Philadelphia, who was scheduled to be the chief defense attorney.

The accused general and his three lawyers came here by arrangement, and here they met Secretary of the NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Page 3 Today.

Navy Adams. The four retired to Secretary Adams' office in the Munitions Building, and there they proceeded to try to solve the "problem."

After a conference that lasted for more than two hours, Gen. Butler presented a statement in which he said that he regretted the Mussolini "incident" and that he regretted that his "indiscreet remarks" caused embarrassment to the Government."

Court-Martial Called Off.

Then Secretary Adams dictated his letter reprimanding Gen. Butler. In a statement in which he made public his letter and that of Gen. Butler, Secretary Adams announced that the court-martial had been called off.

It is significant that in his letter to Secretary Adams, Gen. Butler does not retract what he said about Mussolini. All that he does say is that, when he appeared before the Contemporary Club in Philadelphia he understood that he could speak his "mind freely"; that his remarks were not to be repeated outside; that the Navy Department did not know this when it ordered him court-martialed, and that he regretted the incident and the fact that his indiscretion caused embarrassment to the American Government.

Did Not Retract Story.

He did not say that his story about Mussolini running down a child was untrue, or that he was sorry he told that story. All he said was that he was sorry he had "caused embarrassment to the Government"—that is, the United States Government.

In his reprimand Secretary Adams said that the Navy Department "can not express too clearly its disapproval of the conduct of any officer of the naval establishment in making remarks which tend to embarrass the international relations of the Government."

"Such action on the part of an officer of your rank and length of service," Secretary Adams went on to say, "merits and receives the unqualified condemnation of the Navy Department and for their utterance, which you admit, you are hereby reprimanded."

Butler Appears Satisfied.

Severe as was the statement of Secretary Adams, Gen. Butler was reported to be wel satisfied with the agreement that had been reached. Reporters who saw him leaving Union Station late yesterday reported that he wore a wide grin.

The ButlerMussolini incident goes back to the night of January 19, when Gen. Butler made a speech before the Contemporary Club in Philadelphia, an organiaztion made up largely of lawyers, novelists and other professional persons. In short, the Contemporary Club embraces the intelligensia of Philadelphia.

Talk Somewhat Jocular.

Gen. Butler talked about world peace. Those who heard him have since testified that he talked in a more or less jocular vein. He pointed out that it was difficult to preserve peace when there were "mad-dog" nations which were either reluctant to sign peace pacts, or, having signed them, were unwilling to abide by them.

In the course of his talk, Gen. Butler was quoted as saying:

"A friend of mine said he had a ride in a new auto with Mussolini, a car with an armored nose that could knock over fences and slip under barbed wire.

The Offending Statement.

"He said that they drove through the country and towns at 70 miles an hour. They ran over a child and my friend screamed.

"Mussolini said he shouldn't do that; that it was only one life, and the affairs of state couldn't be stopped by one life. How can you talk disarmament with a man like that?"

Mussolini eventually heard about Gen. Butler's speech. There have been reports that a bootlegger whom Gen. Butler had arrested in Philadelphia six years ago brought the speech to the attention of the Italian Embassy here. In any event, Il Duce heard about it, and he lost no time in making a protest.

On January 27, the Italian Ambassador, Nobile Giacomo de Martino, announced that he had protested to the State Department against the speech of Gen. Butler. At the same time, he stated that the sory that Premier Mussolini had run down a child and refused o stop was both untrue and slanderous.

CUBA IS TRANQUIL, AMBASSADOR SAYS

Dr. Orestes Ferrara Claims Civil Life Is Normal in Island Republic.

'PROPAGANDA' IS SCORED

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Dr. Orestes Ferrara, Cuban Ambassador to the United States, declared tonight in a radio address that "complete tranquillility reigns in Cuba and civil life is progressing normally, as it does in any other well-governed country."

The ambassador defended President Gerardo Machado against what he called "unfounded and unfriendly propaganda" and recounted the accomplishments of the Mechado administration during the last six years.

Referring to the new tariff of economic emergency, he said emphatically it "is only a provisional tariff which will disappear as soon as the necessities of government permit."

"It has been the object of the government," the ambassador explained, "to see that the increased levies are paid by the classes most favored by fortune, and, therefore, able to carry the burden. Cuba, emulating the United States, has carefully planned not to restrict the buying power of persons whose incomes are limited."

Dr. Ferrara said President Machado improved the economic structure of the island republic by encouraging diversification of industries. He added that the president had done much to attract tourists.

BLAINE WILL PRESS POSTAL LEASE CASE

Predicts Inquiry, Resuming Tomorrow, Will Reveal Federal Negligence.

BALTIMORE TO FIGURE

(Associated Press.)

Senator Blaine said last night he expected to produce "further evidence" of the use of political pressure to prevent a second grand jury investigation of the St. Paul Commercial Postoffice station lease.

The chairman of the Senate committee which is investigating postoffice leases also predicted the inquiry would show the Postoffice Department's leasing policy had been unwise and "negligent almost to the extent of culpability."

The Wisconsin Republican has intimated attempt was made to block the St. Paul investigation, lest it "blow up" the presidential campaign of 1928, in the midst of which the grand jury was scheduled to meet to inquire further into the lease, which had been pronounced fraudulent by another jury.

Testimony has been given the committee that former Postmaster General New, who approved the lease, recommended the dismissal of Assistant District Attorney Fesler, at St. Paul, after he had submitted the case to the first grand jury and was preparing it for the second.

Blaine announced his committee will begin a series of daily hearings tomorrow, which will last virtually to the end of the session, and that the St. Paul case will form the basis for a thorough inquiry into the Postoffice Department's leasing policy.

The witnesses will be Charles F. Trotter, assistant to former Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett, and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Schuneman.

Testimony has been received by the committee that Trotter signed Bartlett's name to the St. Paul lease. Schuneman inspected the St. Paul station with Bartlett.

The original lease for the station provided for a rent of $120,750 a year. Testimony has been given that James W. Good, later Secretary of War, negotiated a new lease with New in 1925 whereby the rent would be cut to $120,000 in exchange for elimination of a cancellation clause.

A Federal grand jury at St. Paul, early in 1926, declared this second lease fraudulent and recommended investigation by the Department of Justice. Later a special assistant to the Attorney General submitted a report to the Department of Justice holding there was little basis for action in the case.

Discussing plans for the committee, Blaine said data concerning more than 400 leases will be incorporated in the record. But witnesses will be called only in connection with some of the more important ones.

Among the cases in which witnesses may be called, he said, are leases at Baltimore, Boston and St. Louis.

Warship to Keep Peace at Madeira

Portugal's Move to Import Wheat and Boost Bread Starts Rioting.

Lisbon, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The Portuguese government today sped soldiers, sailors and police into Madeira, where on Friday rioting followed announcement of the government's intention to import 2,000 tons of foreign wheat without duty and to raise the price of bread.

Fifteen hundred troops set out yesterday for the island and today the destroyer Guadinana left with others to assist in maintaining the peace. Sixty Lisbon police also have left for Funchal.

The jurisdiction of the governor of the Azores Archipelago has been extended to Madeira and the governor will assume the title "special delegate" of the government.

Duelists Escape Injury in France

Editor and Journalist Meet on Forbidden Field With Old Ceremony.

Paris, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Dueling, which was thought to have been eradicated in France since the armistice, was revived today, when Horace de Carbuccia, managing editor of a weekly publication, met Henri Danjou, a journalist, with pistols on the field of honor.

Neither was injured. De Carbuccia firing in the air, while Danjou's bullet missed his adversary. They were not reconciled after the duel.

De Carbuccia, a Corsican, objected to certain articles written by Danjou, which the former held to be derogatory to Corsica. Jean Joseph Renaud, famous authority on dueling, who recently wrote a book about the United States, acted as master of ceremonies, pacing off 80 feet between the duelists.

made by you before the Contemporary Club of Philadelphia on January 19, 1931, and in which you invite attention to the fact that prior to delivering your extemporaneous talk at the Club you had been assured by the president of the club that you could speak your "mind freely" and that "from his remarks taken in their entirety" you understood that the club was composed of responsible members of the community interested in public questions, and that your statements were to be confined to the limits of the four walls. It has also just been brought to theattentio n of the Navy Department that the membership of the club had been instructed accordingly pursuant to a resolution previously adopted.

2. You ar informed in this connection that the Navy Department can not express too clearly its disapproval of the conduct of any officer of the naval establishment in making remarks which tend to embarrass the international relations of the Government. Such action on the part of an officer of your rank and length of service merits and receives the unqualified condemnation of the Navy Department and for their utterance, which you admit, you are hereby reprimanded.

3. In view of your letter expressing regret taken in connection with your long record of brilliant service, the Navy Department feels that it is no longer necessary to resort to proceedings by general court-martial, and expects that this incident will have a salutary effect upon your future conduct in matters of this character.

CLEARING OF CANNON CLASSED AS BLUNDER

Birmingham, Ala., who presided, ruled that the accused churchman should have the opportunity of cross-examining witnesses and presenting such defense as he desired. Had the committee found the charges to be well founded, Bishop Cannon would have been suspended from all active duty for three years before he could have been brought to trial.

Secrecy Maintained.

After the hearings ended late Saturday night Bishop Cannon called the Associated Press and said he "had no statement to make now on any subject." Members of the committee also refused any statement.

Seldom has the National Capital seen such elaborate plans for secrecy as were made to keep the proceedings from the public. All the committee members, the four prosecutors and others at the hearing were admonished by Bishop Ainsworth to "be on your honor not to tell anything."

Around the church each day was placed a police guard, and inside a sergeant of detectives stood watch. Bishop Ainsworth came out into the rain to give the decision to reporters, rather than allow them to enter the church, although by that time every one had left except policemen and a Negro janitor.

Macedonian Party Man Is Shot Dead in Sofia

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 8 (A.fl).—Yordian Gurkoff, a member of party of Ivan Michailoff, Macedonian revolutionary leader, was shot to death on the streets of Sofia today in a feud which has broken out anew between two sections by Macedonian revolutionaries.

Two members of the section, formerly led by the slain Gen. Alex Protogueroff, emptied their revolvers into Gurkoff when they met him on the street. They then calmly submitted to arrest.

$1,000,000 Bull Arena Is Opened by Herrera

Bogota, Colombia, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—A new $1,000,000 bull-fighting arena was opened today by President Enrique Olaya Herrera, as 17,000 onlookers cheered.

It was the first bull fighting seen here for a year, but the revival of interest has been tremendous since a new law was passed to permit the use of horses in the arena. They are padded to diminish the danger of gorings.

SCHALL OPENS NEW FIGHT ON MITCHELL

and that the President has been misinformed concerning Mr. Mitchell."

The Attorney General issued a public statement some time ago, saying he could not recommend Mr. Michel, a Minneapolis attorney, to the President, and inferring Senator Schall was backing him in payment of a political debt.

"The attempt of Attorney General Mitchell to name only corporation trained and public-utility-minded attorneys for position on the Federal bench," Senator Schall said yesterday, "warrants the publication of the past corporation-public-utility connections of Mr. Mitchell.

"Shortly I hope to submit to the Senate a list of the former utility and corporation connections of Attorney General Mitchell, so that other members of the Senate may be guided by the information I am about to disclose."

The senator added that he thought the indorsement of "the entire Minnesota delegation backed by over 600 lawyers of my State, headed by the chief justice of our Supreme Court," would be sufficient to cause President Hoover to "hesitate in accepting the noxious campaign of the Attorney General."

side at the opening of Parliament, March 25.

As for constitutional guarantees, the proclamation restored freedom of speech, freedom of writing, freedom of lawful assembly and freedom of political and religious organization movements during the so-called election period. After that Parliament is supposed to take up future government.

The royal decree says that three motives resulted in calling the elections—first, because Spain, after a long absence of parliamentary rule, now needs its reestablishment; second, because many "grave problems" are facing the country, of which one of the most important is labor reform, and third, because of the necessity to modify some of the articles of the constitution of 1876.

Bulgaria Is Declared First Liquor Sahara

Found: The world's first liquor Sahara.

Early in the ninth century King Crum, of Bulgaria, handed down an edict ordering destruction of all vineyards and providing severe punishment for drinking.

So recounted Stephen Bisseroff, charge d'affaires of the Bulgarian Legation, in a radio talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System last night, describing what is believed to be the first instance of government prohibition of liquor, he said.

"One of the tribes defeated by King Crum was the war-like Avars. King Crum discovered that the Avar Kingdom had disintegrated because of drunkenness and corruption had developed in the army. History does not tell us how long the law remained in force.

"During the dark days of the war it was always a source of very great satisfaction to us that your country, after its entry into the conflict, never broke relations with us and never declared war upon us. Your country and mine never have had a quarrel, and in all human probability never will."

Author's Thrust at Lincoln As 'Unkempt' Is Resented

Custodian of Tomb at Springfield Says 300 Pictures He Has Shows Emancipator as Though He's Stepping From "Bandbox."

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The neighborhood that knew Abraham Lincoln best is stirred over Edgar Lee Masters' conception of the Emancipator, H. W. Fay, custodian of Lincoln's Tomb, decried today the description of the Civil War President as "grotesquely dressed and unkempt" in Masters' latest work: "Lincoln—the Man."

"I have 300 pictures of Lincoln, taken at various ages after he was 3 years old, showing him in many poses, and not one even hints that he was 'unkempt.' On the contrary, in each he looks as though he had just stepped from a bandbox. His clothes were neat, his hair well combed and his features pleasant."

At Petersburg, where Lincoln won the love of Ann Rutledge, only to lose it soon after by her death, there is talk of chiseling from the tombstone over her grave the epitaph written by Masters in his "Spoon River Anthology."

Many hereabouts always have objected to this epitaph, contending it should be removed. They believe the words are an injustice to Mary Todd Lincoln.

The epitaph reads:

Out of me, unworthy and unknown!
The vibrations of deathless music!
"With malice toward none, with charity for all."
Out of me, forgiveness of millions toward millions.
And the beneficent fact of a Nation.
Shining with justice and truth.
I am Ann Rutledge, who sleeps beneath these weeds.
Beloved of Abraham Lincoln.
Wedded to him, not through union.
But through separation.
Bloom forever, O republic.
From the dust of my bosom.

Even though the epitaph is objectionable to some, it is probable that Ann Rutledge will rest forever under these words. No one knows who would have the authority to erase them.

LIQUID SUGAR FINDS LOOPHOLE IN TARIFF

$100,000,000 Revenue Loss Likely, Producers Warn Leaders in Congress.

HAWLEY NOTES DANGER

(Associated Press.)

Domestic sugar producers are bombarding congressional leaders for legislation this session to ward off what they describe as a threatened flood of liquid sugar into this country.

The demands aruse out of a provision in the Hawley-Smoot tariff act which the producers fear will permit sugar in liquid form to be imported at a low tariff rate.

They contend this would resultin reducing tariff revenue by $100,000,000 and would swamp local production.

House leaders were somewhat skeptical yesterday on the possibility of enacting legislation at this session to reinforce the only bar to inundation—Treasury regulations which have been challenged in court.

The Treasury has ruled the regular duty should apply to the liquid sugar which is used by candy makers and confectioners.

Hawley Considers Subject.

Chairman Hawley said the ways and means committee was "considering" hearings, but he could give no assurance that they would be held, nor did Republic Leader Tilson foresee action in the short time left.

Should the court decision go against the Treasury, it would leave a loophole in the 1930 tariff act—a puncture made by a discovery of which, Hawley said, "nobody dreamed" while the law was being formed.

Through this opening, domestic producers predict, thousands of tons of liquid sugar would flow into the United States, paying ¼ of a cent a gallon, or 6 cents a hundred pounds, instead of the prescribed duty.

The Smoot-Hawley tariff act placed the duty on Cuban sugar, dry or in solution, on a graduated scale, applying to solutions of 50 degrees sugar content and above. The duty reaches as high as $2 a hundred, depending on the sugar content.

How Discovery Is Made.

Shortly thereafter two cargoes billed to the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Co. at Philadelphia arived from Cuba and started the discussion. The importers called it sirup, and insisted it should pay only the ¼-cent rate, because it contained only 47 degrees sugar content. Discovery of the process of handling the lower-content saturated solution was made after enactment of the tariff bill.

Later a New York molasses company brought in fifteen carloads of the same material. The Treasury ruled it was sugar and must pay the full duty.

Then the Savanah Cugar Co. imported a trifling quantity to make a test of the regulation. The Treasury applied the ruling.

Woods Asked to Quit; Hoover Called Despot

Demand that Col. Arthur Woods resign as head of the Hoover Commission on Unemployment and "tell the truth which the President is so wickedly trying to suppress" was made in a public statement yesterday by the People's Loby, of which Prof. John Dewey is president.

'Col. Woods, however, can not shift responsibility to the President for the most brutal treatment any government ever wreaked on its people unless he resigns from the President's committee and tells all the facts," the statement read. 'If it be contrary to public policy for an officer to criticize the actions of a foreign despot, it is certainly contrary to public policy to condone the cruelty of a domestic despot."

Police Believe Man Shot To Death Is Trial Figure

Cleveland, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The body of a man, believed by police to be that of William E. Potter, former city councilman, who was to have gone on trial tomorrow on perjury charges in connection with a city land scandal, was found in a Northeast Side apartment house tonight.

The man had been shot to death and investigation was under way to determine whether it was a murder or suicide.

Hunt for Missing Girl Spurred.

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Private detectives were enlisted today to assist in the search for Miss Florence Parker, 22-year-old heiress, missing since January 26. Her mother, Mrs. James MacDonough, of Yonkers, N. Y., said a reward for information on her daughter probably will be offered within a few days.

SON OF OTTO KAHN MARRIES ACTRESS

Justice of Peace Presides at Their Wedding in Cold Spring Harbor.

BRIDE LEFT PRODUCTION

Huntington, N. Y., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—John Deans, justice of the peace here, tonight said he had married Roger Wolfe Kahn, son of Otto Kahn, the banker, and Hannah Williams, actress, at the Kahn mansion at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., on January 26.

He said witnesses to the marriage were Mrs. Addie C. Kahn, mother, and C. Bertram Kahn.

Deans said Kahn gave his age as 23 and his occupation that of composer. It was his first marriage.

Miss Williams gave no occupation and her age as 20. It was her second marriage. Her first husband, she said, was Charles Kaley, and the marriage was annulled in Cook County June 30, 1927. She said she was born in Taylor, Pa., daughter of Thomas J. and Martha Hughes Williams.

Broadway had known of the romance of the young orchestra leader and aviator for a long time and rumors that the marriage would take place soon were particularly insistent in the last few days.

Miss Williams until recently was a principal in "Sweet and Low," musical comedy, in which she sang the ditty, "Cheerful Little Earful," with marked success.

Billy Rose, producer of the show, said that Miss Williams terminated her contract suddenly at the request of Otto H. Kahn, now her father-in-law, who is chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

She left vaudeville in 1927 to dance at Kahn's night club, Le Perroquet, in Paris, which had a mirror for a dance floor. She popularized "Hard Hearted Hannah, the Vamp of Savannah."

The new Mrs. Kahn has often visited airports where young Kahn did fancy flying in his de luxe plane.

MARKET BASKETS NOT WASTE BASKETS

Three hundred and fifty dollars* a year is about the price each family in the United States has to pay for waste in distribution—that is, for wasteful methods used in bringing from manufacturers to consumers the goods sold in retail stores... This means that your family is charged nearly a dollar a day for sheer waste. An extra dollar a day—not for better service, not for better merchandise—but for careless, old-fashioned, roundabout ways of doing business.

It is not necessary to reduce the quality of goods in order to reduce prices. It is only necessary to reduce waste. The best food is not costly; waste always is.

A&P, after years of experience, has solved the problems of eliminating all wastes in the distribution of food. That is why it is able to sell the best foods at the lowest prices. Its customers pay no tax in wastes.

The Great ATLANTIC & PACIFIC Tea Co.

*Based on the estimate published by the U. S. Department of Commerce that the waste in distribution in this country every year amounts to $10,000,000,000.

RAIL LINK FINISHED TO TIDEWATER AREA

Taplins Seek Short Line to Baltimore Through 38-Mile Extension.

WILL OPEN TOMORROW

Connellsville, Pa., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—A $15,000,000 ribbon of new steel winds diagnally across the southwestern corner of Pennsylvania today, bringing nearer to realization a dream of the railroad brothers, the Taplins, of Cleveland.

The steel ribbon is the recently completed 38-mile extension of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railroad from Connellsville to Cochrans Mill. The dream is of a new short line connection between the Middle West and Great Lakes and tidewater at Baltimore.

To realize the dream, the Taplins must acquire the Western Maryland, with which the Pittsburgh & West Virginia extension connects at Connellsville, and the Wheeling & Lake Erie. These matters are involved in consolidation plans pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Aside from this, the new extension penetrates the heart of the coal and industrial communities of the great Monongahela Valley, and was built with the idea of speeding up the growth of the section by providing easy access to the Pittsburgh markets.

The stretch of road will be opened formally at ceremonies here Tuesday when a golden spike will be driven at the junction of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia with the Western Maryland. W. H. Nethken, vice president in charge of transportation for the Pittsburgh & West Virginia, will drive the spike.

Frank E. Taplin is president and Charles F. Taplin is chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia.

Work is in progress on a branch line of the Donora Southern, a belt road of the American Steel & Wire Co., which would link with the Pittsburgh & West Virginia at Pigeon Creek and serve the company's mills. This will cost $1,500,000.

Tobacco Market Holds Up Well

Petersburg Sales in Next 3 Weeks May Bring Total to 5,000,000 Pounds.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 8.—Petersburg tobacco market held up last week about as well as it had in recent weeks, indications being that sales for the season will reach 5,000,000 pounds and set a new high record. Three more weeks of selling remain and it is believed sufficient tobacco is held by growers to bring the total to the figure mentioned.

Last week 149,022 pounds were sold here, bringing sales for the season to 4,476,230 pounds and receipts to $422,025.

Dark tobacco continues to come in slowly. So far 102,514 pounds have been handled here. Of this, 8,042 pounds were sold last week. The price paid for this type during the season has reached $102,514. Most of this tobacco has gone at relatively low prices.

Guard Unit Leaves Schoolfield Zone

Secrecy Marks Withdrawal of Artillery From Strike Area.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Feb. 8.—Secrecy today marked the withdrawal from Schoolfield of some of the units of the 246th Artillery which have been doing strike duty in Schoolfield. Just how many troops were still on hand tonight was not known, but it was a mere handful. Maj. Robertson, adjutant, stated that the complete detail would be gone tomorrow and that some were being held over pending settlement of the property account.

It was noted today that the special force of constables was on duty, some armed with shotguns and others with rifles with bayonets, giving a bizarre appearance to the civilian guards.

Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, did not attend last night's mass meeting of union people. Many got up and left when it was announced that he would be here "within three days." Paul Aymon, organizer, spoke to the union membership and stressed the necessity of the idle workers maintaining the power of organization.

L. Claude Slightly Hurt as Two Other Americans Suffer in Fall.

Cristobal, Canal Zone, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Three Americans, who were injured last night in the crack-up of a Pan-American amphibian plane near here, will recover.

N. D. Voss, of Pensacola, Fla., radio operator, suffered a broken shoulder and broken ankle, while L. Claude, of Annapolis, Md., the pilot, and Ira Unsworth, of Missouri, mechanic, were cut and bruised. They are in Cristobal Hospital.

The accident occurred early at night when the plane's gas was exhausted after it had bucked strong headwinds on a flight from Tallara, Peru. A search was begun when radio communication was stopped and after several hours soldiers from France Field cut through the almost impenetrable jungle to find the aviators.

FAIRFAX WILL BUY SECOND WELL SITE

Small Plot on Fair Grounds Is Ordered Sold by Directors.

EARLY START IS PLANNED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 243, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

The Board of Directors of the Fairfax County Fair Association, at a special meeting in the office of its secretary, Robert D. Graham, at Fairfax, voted to sell a small plot of ground in the fair grounds, on the Cedar avenue side in the rear of the secretary's office. The town council will sink a second well on this plot, to provide a portion of the town's water supply.

In view of the fact that the property has two trusts upon it, final action could not be taken, pending receipt of consent from the trust holders. The first trust is held by the National Bank of Fairfax and the second is secured by a series of small notes combined under one trustee. The money received from the sale of this ground will be applied to payment of the trusts.

According to Mayor Thomas P. Chapman the town was offered a site for the second well, free of cost, by W. F. Corne, on property at the rear of his home, but the cost of running a pipe line from this site to the main would have been almost as large as the cost of the fair ground lot. The lot purchased has the added advantage of being on higher ground.

As soon as the purchase of the ground is completed, the second well will be drilled. The town council plans to ask for bids for the two pumps within the next few days. The installation of the water tower and the mains is expected to be started in the near future.

The Fairfax County Teachers Association, at a meeting in McLean, voted to accept recommendations by the association's executive committee to form an advisory council. This body would deal with the county school board through the divisional superintendent of schools, Wilbert T. Woodson, in all questions involving teachers. This board will be composed of five members, one representing the school principals, one the high school teachers, one the grammar grades, one elementary grades, and one the one room schools. The members of this council will be elected at the teachers' meeting next month.

Reports from the State teachers' convention held in Richmond were given by Miss Marie Creel, Miss Elizabeth Simms, Gordon E. Smith and C. P. Scott.

Group meetings were also held. Mrs. Elsie Davis, rural supervisor, presided over the grammar group; Miss Louise Millard, over the primary group and Miss Eolene Follin over the high school group. The principal topic discussed was the unit method of instruction.

On the recommendation of Superintendent Woodson the requirements for membership by pupils on the monthly honor roll was amended. Under the old requirements no student who was absent for any reason could be included on this roll, no matter how high his marks were. The amendment now makes it possible for students to be excused for a correction of a physical defect, on written statement of parents, and still have their names on the honor roll. This is in line with the drive for correction of a large number of dental defects among school children, and for removal of tonsils, in accordance with the recommendation of the county health nurse.

Superintendent Woodston stated that he was so favorably impressed by the meeting, and the way in which the teachers approached their problems, that he would set aside one school day during the next month for an all-day meeting by the association.

Willie Ann Lancaster, colored, 2922 Sherman avenue, Washington, was injured on the Lee highway, east of Merrifield, when a car driven by Samuel Wertleb, of 1001 G street southeast, Washington, skidded and was hit by a car driven by Morris Lancaster, according to Arthur W. Mills, county policeman, and Deputy Sheriff Paul Herman. The girl was taken to Emergency Hospital in Washington by a passing motorist.

The teachers of the Columbia Baptist Sunday School at Falls Church will meet tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. Harry Borgstadt in East Falls Church.

The Young Peoples Missionary Society of the Andrew Chapel Church will meet this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Oliver. The topic for discussion will be "An International Banquet." Members will represent different countries, with Miss Agnes Orrison leading the program.

The western group of the Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church at Falls Church will meet at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Byron Austin.

The Epworth League of the Southern Methodist Church at Falls Church will hold a rally this evening in the church.

The congregation of the Crossman Methodist Church will meet this evening in the church on Washington street, in Falls Church, to discuss the proposed reorganization of the activities of the Methodist Episcopal churches in northern Virginia, which will go into effect this year. Ordinarily discussion of church business is confined to meetings of the official board, but because of the general nature of the contemplated changes all members of the congregation have been invited to participate.

County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr will hold a second in a series of soil-testing demonstrations this evening in the Floris Schoolhouse.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With greater opportunities for rapid development facing Arlington County than ever before, the Chamber of Commerce is preparing a program to bring to the citizens some of the most important problems, the principal of which is the development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, according to the newly elected president, Louis C. Carl.

"Plans have been completed for new offices of the Chamber of Commerce in the Kelley Building, and it is my purpose, with the aid of the officers and citizens of Arlington County, to formulate plans that will make possible during my term of office some of the opportunities now confronting this county, which mean more development than, at this time, we can appreciate," Mr. Carl said.

"With the new memorial bridge now about completed, which means the third entrance into Arlington County, we in Arlington County should put our shoulders to the wheel and see that the provisions of the Capper-Cramton bill for the building of the George Washington-Memorial Parkway are carried out to the letter. With the Mount Vernon boulevard leading from the bridge on its left at the entrance to Virginia and the parkway leading from the right to Great Falls, Arlington County is bound to be in the midst of the greatest development in its history."

Among other projects to be considered are plans for a general clean-up in the county in preparation for the bicentennial, which opens next year, and the continuance of street car service to Washington.

President Carl stated that within the next few days he will announce the appointment of chairmen for all standing committees.

With the election of officers, the organization of the Arlington County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations will be perfected at the meeting in the Matthew Fontaine Maury School at Clarendon tonight. Each Parent-Teacher Association in the county is urged to send three delegates to this meeting.

According to the sponsors it will hold the same relation to the separate Parent-Teacher Association as does the Arlington County Civic Federation to the local citizens associations.

According to the report of the county health department there were examined 70 preschool children at the dental clinic this month. There were 32 new children. The report shows there were 36 children treated by Dr. C. R. Boyland, county school dentist, in charge of the clinic. The number showing defects were 22.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston will hold its monthly meeting in the school auditorium tonight at 8.

The Grand Lodge of Masons in Virginia will hold its annual meeting at Richmond tomorrow. The sessions will continue through Thursday. Election of officers will take place.

May, past master and past district deputy grand master of District No. 54; Jesse W. Rohrback, past master Cherrydale Lodge; Hugh Reid, past master of Cherrydale Lodge; A. B. Honts, senior warden of Cherrydale Lodge, and Ralph H. Honer, junior warden of Cherrydale Lodge.

Arlington Chapter, No. 39, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the auditorium of the Cherrydale firemen's hall.

Plans are being rapidly completed by the Cherrydale Volunteer Fire Department for the eleventh annual minstrel show to be given in the auditorium of the firemen's hall the evenings of March 19, 20 and 21. The proceeds will go to the maintenance fund.

The Edward Douglas White Council, Knights of Columbus, will hold its seventh annual minstrel show and dance the evenings of February 16 and 17 in the auditorium of St. Charles School at Clarendon. In addition to the regular minstrel show, several specialty numbers are to be offered.

The arrangements committee consists of Robert Raeburn, general chairman; L. W. Metzger, A. A. Kirchner, J. L. Mulligan, Eugene Shreve, Thomas J. Crack, T. L. Miller, J. F. Cavanaugh, H. H. Milks, H. W. Hendley, S. J. Garrity, B. F. Toulotte, A. E. Brady and A. A. Moore.

WORK ON EXTERIOR OF TEMPLE IS ENDED

Memorial at Alexandria to George Washington Is Near Completion.

OIL PORTRAIT DISPLAYED

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

All the exterior stonework on the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple which is being erected in George Washington Park, has been completed, and the scaffolding removed, making the huge building show up in all its impressive detail. The aluminum lantern at the apex of the tower has been installed, but the lighting system has not been completed. This lantern, the largest of its kind in the world, was presented by the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons.

The interior work on the temple, including drainage and plumbing work, is now under way and, although there is a large amount of interior work to be done, including the placing of marble on the walls, finishing floors and decorative work, it is expected this will be completed in another year, so that the temple will be ready for dedication on Washington's Birthday, 1932, as a part of the bicentennial celebration to be held at that time. In the last year the memorial association has expended $225,000 on the construction work, making a total of more than $2,500,000 thus far spent. The temple, when completed, will represent an outlay of approximately $4,000,000.

The annual meting of the memorial association, which has charge of the building of this temple in memory of George Washington, the Mason, will be held February 23 and 24, the principal business to be transacted being the reading of the financial report for the year and the receiving of new pledges to be paid in 1931. The funds for the construction of the temple are being contributed by Masonic grand lodges, subordinate lodges and individuals throughout the United States, and each year sufficient money is pledged to take care of building operations for that year. Heretofore the work has been discontinued during the winter, this policy having been adopted to insure absolute permanency and to avoid danger of faulty work being done with materials which might be affected by cold weather.

The original idea in building this memorial temple was to house the priceless relics of George Washington, now in possession of the Alexandria-Washington lodge, of which Washington was the first master. The project, however, soon assumed a national character, and the memorial association, formed of representatives of every grand jurisdiction in the United States, was formed, and the temple and its surroundings were designed by leading architects and landscape artists.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett yesterday invited a number of friends to view at their home on Duke street a new oil portrait of Dr. Barrett's mother, Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, who, among many other positions of honor held by her, was the second national president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The portrait, which is by Charles Sneed Williams, of Louisville and Chicago, is a replica of the one hanging in the American Legion national headquarters in Indianapolis, and is from a photograph selected by representatives of the twelve Southern departments of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Harry D. Kirk has been chosen as president of the George Washington Birthday Association, with the following vice presidents, Harry Hammond, Carroll Pierce, L. H. Dudley, Judge Howard W. Smith, W. C. Fulton and M. L. Price; Martin E. Greene is secretary and J. William May, treasurer.

Mark L. Price is chairman of a committee to place a wreath on the tomb of Gen. Washington on February 22, and all officers of the association will accompany the committee, as well as the local Boy Scouts, under the direction of Scoutmaster W. L. Leitch.

There will be no celebration by the association on Washington's birthday, but plans will begin formation at the March meeting for the big celebration in 1932.

Alexandria Lodge No. 752, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will hold Past Exalted Ruler's Night on Monday, March 9, and preceding the services at the Elks' Home a dinner will be given the past exalted rulers at the George Mason Hotel.

John M. Reed has been named chairman of a membership drive committee, and a large class will be inducted into the lodge on March 9 at the special meeting. The officers of Alexandria lodge will confer the degree on a class of candidates for Washington Lodge No. 15, on March 11.

The monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce will be held at 8 tonight at the George Mason Hotel, when matters of importance will be up for consideration, and also a report will be presented on the proposed abandonment of the electric railway line to Washington.

The monthly meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club will be held at 7 tomorrow evening at the George Mason Hotel, presided over by Mrs. Mary W. Troth.

279,000 SEEDLING TREES DISTRIBUTED

Virginia Nursery Furnishes 102 Applicants With Native Species.

PINES LEADING REQUESTS

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—State Forester Chapin Jones has estimated in his annual nursery report today that 279,000 small seedlings and transplants were distributed during 1930 from the Virginia State Forest Tree Nursery for reforesting idle lands in Virginia.

These trees were distributed to 102 different applicants, widely scattered over the State, each applicant receiving on the average 2,000 or 3,000 trees. About 17,000 of the trees were set out in the Gallion State Forest, at Green Bay, in Prince Edward County.

Mr. Jones said the trees, which were distributed for reforestation only, and not as ornamental or shade trees, were in most cases only from 6 to 12 inches high, and were principally of the best and most abundant native species of pine. The largest number distributed of any one species was about 120,000 1 and 2-year-old seedlings and translants of the species of pine, known by foresters as loblolly pine, which is the commonest pine of the Tidewater section of the State. Next in order were 57,000 trees distributed of the short leaf pine, which is the commonest pine of the Piedmont section. This tree is the one of which the old growth is commonly known as forest pine or woods pine, and the young growth of which is coming in abundantly on old fields, particularly south of the James River. However, it is not always recognized to be the same species as the old "woods" pine.

Red Pines Included.

Also 24,000 2-year-old American red pines were distributed. The species is not native to Virginia, but it is extremely popular for reforestation in the Northern States; about 21,000 black or yellow locusts and about 12,000 white pines were added to the lot.

The locust occurs naturally in the central and western parts of the State. It is famous for its hard, durable, strong wood, and for its ability to check the erosion of soil and to improve the fertility of soil. Experience has shown this to be one of the best of all kinds of trees for reforesting gullied land.

Mr. Jones said these trees were grown and distributed by the State principally for the sake of their educational value in that they furnish object lessons in the characteristics of different trees and how they may be used for reforesting idle and waste lands. The seedlings were sold at a low cost for the purpose of encouraging such reforestation. The cost was only $3 per 1,000 trees, less than one-third of a cent a tree, in most cases; in a few cases as high as $7 a thousand trees was charged. The spacing of the trees usually recommended is in rows six and one-half feet apart each way, which requires only 1,000 trees to reforest an acre of ground. Under ordinary conditions one man can set out a thousand trees in a day, Mr. Jones estimates.

Virginia Ranks Second.

Figures compiled by the United States Forest Service, which cooperates with most of the States in raising trees for distribution, Mr. Jones said, showed that during 1929, in number of trees distributed for reforestation, Virginia ranked sixteenth among the States in the Union and second among the Southern States, being outranked in the South only by Louisiana.

The amount of reforestation, however, in Virginia and in all other Southern States was exceedingly small as compared with the amount of such work done in a number of the Northern States, among which New York took the lead in 1929 by distributing about 25,000,000 trees from its State nurseries, the State forester's report pointed out. The comparable figures for 1930 are not yet available.

The Virginia State Forest Tree Nursery was moved in June, 1930, and is now located near Charlottesville on Route 28, two miles southwest of the University of Virginia, on a part of the property acquired by the State Commission for the Blind for the purpose of erecting a school for the blind. The public has been invited by Mr. Jones to visit the tree nursery and inspect the trees in the different stages of development.

Dartmoor Prison Breaker Caught

Desperado Seized on Street at Plymouth, Eng.; Another Hunted.

Plymouth, England, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—John Mullins, one of two desperate prisoners who escaped from Dartmoor Prison Friday night, was arrested on the street here today. A posse of officers, led by bloodhounds, continued the hunt across the moors for his companion, John Michael Gasken.

Mullins, who with the other convict, slipped away from a prison line and scaled a 32-foot wall with a rope ladder, was seized by a policeman who recognized him. He wore prison clothes when he made his dash for freedom, but he was clad in plain clothes today.

Authorities redoubled efforts to overtake the other fugitive since it is tradition that no man has ever made good his escape from Dartmoor. Those living in the vicinity of the prison have been in a high state of excitement since the break, for both men were known to be of violent dispositions. One was a forger and desperado and the other a burglar.

LOS ANGELES SOARS OVER PANAMA SEAS

Dirigible Refuels, Provisions Before Starting Cruise; Weather Perfect.

SHIP IS HEAVY IN NIGHT

U. S. S. Los Angeles, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The naval dirigible Los Angeles unhitched from its mast-ship, the Patoka, at 8:10 o'clock this morning for a cruise over Panama waters while awaiting the annual United States naval maneuvers to begin February 15.

Before the ship left it refueled and reprovisioned, taking aboard 20,000 cubic feet of helium gas, 200 pounds of ice, 50 loaves of bread, a loin of beef and other edibles from the mast-ship.

Last night the big dirigible became heavy because of the cooling air and several officers who were sleeping aboard were awakened at midnight to lighten the pull of the dirigible against the mast.

The cruise today was made in perfect weather.

Colon, Canal Zone, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Eight United States naval patrol planes flew from Guantanamo, Cuba, to the Coco Solo naval air station today to participate in the American war games, covering the 780 miles in 8 hours and 40 minutes.

Two others started, but turned back when one developed an obstruction in its oil line.

Olympia House Passes Russ Forced-Labor Bill

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—In strict economy measures the Washington House may be said to have the edge on the Senate, so far this season. The Senate adopted a memorial to Congress opposing importation of all Russian goods. It was to be telegraphed to the State's members in Congress.

The House rewrote the memorial to apply only to Russian "forced labor" made goods and provided it should be sent to Washington by air mail.

construction on Government projects in the West.

Drought relief, veterans' compensation and appropriation bills will be the measures behind which the united drive of both Republican and Democratic leaders will be centered in the closing weeks.

Oil Bill May Come Up Next.

Restriction of foreign oil imports probably will receive consideration next. The Senate has before it the Capper bill restricting imports to 16,000,000 barrels annually and banning all refined products. It was approved by the commerce committee by 8 to 6.

Senators La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, and Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, will lead the Senate opposition to the drought relief compromise. Senator Borah, Idaho, a leader of the Republican independents, intimated yesterday he would join them, although he is waiting for a statement of their views by the Democratic leaders who approved it.

Despite the approval by the Arkansas senators, Representative Parks (Democrat), Arkansas, issued a statement terming the compromise "a face-saving proposition."

Parks Opposes Deal.

"My leaders have agreed," Parks said. "There is nothing left for a private in the rear ranks to do. But I certainly am opposed to the compromise.

"If they are honest and mean business, they ought to say the funds can be used for food. Furthermore, the starving people have no collateral to put up for loans."

Parks said the report of Col. Campbell Hodges, assuring that the Red Cross was taking care of the Arkansas situation, was "to be expected."

Hodges, a military aid to President Hoover, has reported to the War Department the Red Cross is caring adequately for the distressed in Arkansas. He said he made a survey of that State.

Representative French (Republican), Idaho, is prominent in the group opposed to modernization. He has taken a stand against any expenditure on old battleships. Representatives Stafford (Wisconsin) and LaGuardia (New York), Republicans, also are among those who oppose the authorization.

By JOHN J. DALY

On the way to Oberammergau, E. M. Newman, the well-known traveltalker, stopped over at Munich, since this is one of the best approaches to the little Bavarian village where the Passion Play is staged each decade.

Munich, as almost everybody and his brother knows, is the beer capital of the world, and Mr. Newman, in the course of this traveltalk yesterday in the National Theater, showed to what glorious heights foam can rise, what municipal monuments may be built from the profits accruing from the general distribution of lager; but he failed to show even one stein of beer.

At Oberammergau, however, Mr. Newman turned his camera on the tables set outside the larger and more hospitable hostelries, and there before your very eyes were men and women quaffing the famous brew—Munch beer.

Not a hand was raised in applause at the sight of this ceremonial. Washington is not a beer-drinking community.

In the office of the National Theater, where the books are balanced, Charles Mercer, under whose direction Mr. Newman appears here every Sunday, received reports of this lack of enthusiasm on the part of a Washington audience. The sublieutenants came to Mr. Mercer and told him the sad news: Not a hand was lifted in applause when the seidels were sliding over the mahogany, he was told in so many words.

"What!" murmured Mr. Mercer, aghast, "Has Washington no soul?"

"What d'ye mean, no soul?" he was asked.

"That they do not appreciate even pictures of Munich beer," said the director, and wept.

In the course of an upstairs lecture, given while Mr. Newman entertained his audience in the main auditorium, it developed that Baltimore, Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities where the Newman Traveltalks are being presented each week, go into rhapsodies at the sight of a beaker of beer.

"And yet they call Washington a city of culture," mused Mr. Mercer, packing his grips, preparatory to the onslaught on Baltimore.

Well, Washington liked the rest of the picture, anyway, as it likes most all the interesting samples of world photography shown here under the genial auspices of Mr. Newman, who plays to "standing room only" at each recurrent visit.

As yet, no one has ever taken a motion-picture of the "Passion Play of Oberammergau"—though one American company offered a cool million for the rights—so Mr. Newman concerns himself with cinema studies of the inhabitants of the little town, and with still pictures of the great play.

HISTORY OF NEGROES CITED AT SERVICES

Week of Observation Opens With Exercises at City Churches.

SCHOOLS PLAN EVENT

Services in celebration of National Negro History week were held yesterday, under auspices of community centers of divisions 10-13 of public schools, in all colored churches here and in adjacent communities. The career of Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Negro poet, who was at one time an employe of the Library of Congress, was especially featured, as the celebration started on the day of his death in Dayton, Ohio, a quarter of a century ago, and will close on his birthday, next Saturday.

The national celebration was organized by the Association for Study of Negro Life and History, 1538 Ninth street northwest, headed by Dr. Carter G. Woodson. Aside from services in churches, special meetings have been called in school auditoriums throughout the week, for pupils and the public.

Miss Nannie H. Burroughs, president of the National Training School for Women and Girls, together with Mrs. Mary Church Terrell and Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, will speak on "Progress of the American Colored Woman" Tuesday night in the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School auditorium. Mrs. Anna Murray will speak at the Garfield Center on Wednesday night on "Benjamin Banneker." A stereopticon lecture will be given on the same night at Frelinghuysen University.

Church Dedicated; Cost Is $4,000,000

Fosdick Heard by 2,400 at ...vices Attended by Rockefeller.

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The Nonsectarian Riverside Church, pulpit of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, and place of worship of John D. Rockefeller, jr., and his family, was dedicated today, with a warning by its pastor that civilization can not be sustained without the message which the church of God is trying to convey.

A congregation of 2,400 persons filled the auditorium and galleries of the $4,000,000 gothic edifice, high above the Hudson beside Grant's Tomb, and hundreds more heard the services by amplifiers in other rooms of the church, or stood outside on snowy Riverside Drive hoping in vain to enter.

Among the 2,400 was Mr. Rockefeller, jr., whose beneficence helped largely in building the church—the third which the congregation of Dr. Fosdick has occupied in the last nine years, in an effort to obtain for him a place of worship ample for the throngs which seek to hear him.

Income Tax Facts

NO. 8.

Of the millions of taxpayers who will be required to file returns for the year 1930, the vast majority are entitled, in addition to the personal exemption of $3,500 for married persons and heads of families, $1,500 for single persons, and a $400 credit for each dependent, to a further credit of 25 per cent of the tax on the full amount of their earned net income.

Earned income is defined as "wages, salaries, professional fees and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered." However, all net income up to $5,000, whether actually earned or not, is considered earned income for the purpose of this credit. A taxpayer who in 1930 received a salary of $4,000 and a profit from a real estate transaction, or other business venture, of $1,000 may treat the entire amount as earned income. When it is shown by statistics that out of a total of approximately 4,000,000 returns filed more than 3,000,000 reported incomes of between $3,000 and $5,000, the far-reaching benefit of this reduction is understood. Following is an example of how a single person with no dependents should compute his tax on a net income of $4,000:

Net income	$4,000.00
Less personal exemption	1,500.00
Balance taxable at 1½ per cent.	2,500.00
1½ per cent	37.50
Less 25 per cent of $37.50, earned income credit	9.38
Balance of tax payable	28.12

The maximum amount that may be claimed as earned income is $30,000, although the taxpayer actually may have earned an amount in excess of that sum.

Temblor Revisits New Zealand Area

Inhabitants of Napier Flee Shore Line as Heavy Breakers Rise.

Wellington, New Zealand, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Heavy earthquake shocks again rocked the Napier and Hastings section of the Hawkes Bay district, which was the scene of last Tuesday's disastrous quake in which many persons were killed. Today's tremors started at 2 p. m.

The face of a bluff overlooking Napier was sheared by further landslides. Heavy breakers swept the beaches and forced the terrified inhabitants, encamped about the town, to flee from the above line to higher ground. Dislocation of communication has made it difficult to obtain full details of the disturbances.

Napier, New Zealand Area, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The number of deaths in the recent severe earthquakes in Napier was placed at 108 today after further reconstruction and search of the ruins had been completed. Among the survivors is James Colling, 90, who dug himself out of the ruins of the old men's home. He was taken to a hospital where he is reported to be doing well.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Will Rogers Increases Fund For Drought Aid to $172,000

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Thanks to Will Rogers and his salable wise cracks, the "folks back home" in his native Oklahoma have approximately $90,000 with which to relieve suffering from the drought and unemployment.

The cowboy humorist, who for the last two weeks has been a flying ambassador of mercy, staged the grand finale of his Oklahoma speaking tour for relief funds here tonight before a $20,000 house, his biggest yet.

His Oklahoma performances swelled the total of his charity chest for the Southwest to $172,000, Texas having paid $82,000 to hear his benefit barbs the week before. Appearances in Arkansas are next on his schedule. Entire proceeds of the entertainments are given to charity.

Piloted by Capt. Frank Hawks, noted speed flier, in a plane lent for the purpose by the Navy Department, Rogers visited 20 Oklahoma cities in seven days, giving morning, matinee and night performances.

Claremore and Chelsea, each claiming to be Rogers' "home town," received calls from the famous humorist today. He made a morning appearance at Claremore and a noonday stop at Chelsea, where with Mrs. Rogers and their son, Will, jr., were dinner guests of his sister, Mrs. Tom McPhadden.

The strain of his strenuous schedule is beginning to tell on Rogers, and physicians have ordered him to do no more roping exhibitions in connection with his entertainments. He declared here, however, that he felt fine, and would do his sleeping and resting "after this is all over."

Rogers' tour has been productive of more than relief funds. In Texas it sprouted a presidential boom, with former Gov. James E. Ferguson taking the lead in suggesting Will's Democratic nomination in 1932. Ferguson described Rogers as the "Ben Franklin of this age."

In Fort Smith, Ark., the Forty and Eight Society of the American Legion started a movement to have Congress award Rogers a special medal of honor.

BARRED BY TREATY.

A bill proposing to limit imports of crude oil and to prohibit imports of refined oil is pending before the Senate. It is supported by influential petroleum producers and has been favorably reported by the Senate committee on commerce.

Congress can not enact this legislation without violating the Geneva convention for the abolition of import and export prohibitions, to which the United States is a party. This convention was approved by the Senate September 19, 1929, and proclaimed by President Hoover March 6, 1930.

The purpose of the United States in adhering to this treaty was to bring about the removal of restrictions and prohibitions against American commerce. The United States, on its part, pledges itself not to apply restrictions or prohibitions to imports. The essential portion of the treaty is as follows:

> • • • The high contracting parties undertake to abolish within a period of six months from the date of the coming into force of the present convention, insofar as the respective territories of each of them are concerned, all import and export prohibitions or restrictions, and not thereafter to impose any such prohibitions or restrictions.

The signatories of the treaty are Germany, Austria, Belgium, Great Britain, Denmark, United States, France, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Norway, Netherlands, Portugal, Roumania, Switzerland and Jugoslavia. Other nations have the right to accede to the convention.

Provision is made in the convention for arbitration of any dispute arising from the interpretation or application of the provisions of the convention. The convention extends for five years from the date it came into force.

The Capper bill proposing to limit and prohibit the importation of petroleum provides that during 1931, 1932 and 1933 the total importations of crude petroleum shall not exceed 16,000,000 barrels per year, and that the amount imported from each country shall be scaled down in proportion to the amount imported from that country in 1928. The bill provides that the importation of refined petroleum and fuel oil shall be entirely prohibited during the three years named.

Imports of crude petroleum and gasoline from the Dutch West Indies are entitled to entry under the treaty which abolishes restrictions and prohibitions. Yet the Capper bill would reduce by about three-fourths the import of crude petroleum and prohibit entirely the import of fuel oil and gasoline from the Dutch West Indies. These islands were the largest exporters of crude oil to the United States in 1928. Last year the imports of crude oil from the Dutch West Indies amounted to 2780,219 barrels, and the imports of fuel and refined oils amounted to 22,000,000 barrels.

Venezuela is a heavy exporter of petroleum to the United States. Although that country does not appear to be a party to the Geneva convention, it would suffer gross and unprovoked injury by the proposed legislation, and undoubtedly would demand relief through arbitration. The United States would be unable to justify its action, either under international law or under the convention. In signing the convention the United States adhered to the preamble, which declares that "import and export restrictions, and the arbitrary practices and disguised discriminations to which they give rise, have had deplorable results;" and that "it is important for the recovery and future development of world trade that governments should abandon a policy which is equally injurious to their own and to the general interest;" and that "a return to the effective liberty of international commerce is one of the primary conditions of world prosperity."

A prohibition of imports is an embargo, which is essentially an unfriendly act, usually applied only in extreme cases for the purpose of exacting redress for grievances. It is unthinkable that the United States should declare an embargo upon imports from countries with which it is on terms of friendly intercourse.

The United States in ratifying the Geneva convention made the reservation "that the said convention affects neither the tariff systems nor the treaty-making methods of the participating countries."

The United States can impose a tariff duty upon crude or refined oil, but it can not apply restrictions or prohibitions under its treaty obligations. It is surprising that the members of the Senate committee on commerce have forgotten the fact that they voted only eighteen months ago to ratify a treaty to abolish restrictions and prohibitions of imports and exports. The treaty was unanimously approved by the Senate.

GEN. BUTLER REPRIMANDED.

In view of his letter expressing regret that his indiscreet remarks had caused embarrassment to the Government, and in view of his long record of brilliant service, the Navy Department has abandoned its plans to try Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler by court-martial and has reprimanded him instead.

Gen. Butler advises the department that he understood that his remarks were to be confined to the limits of the four walls of the Contemporary Club.

Secretary Adams, in reprimanding Gen. Butler, makes it clear that he expects the incident to have a salutary effect upon the conduct of that officer in matters of this character.

The correspondence indicates that Gen. Butler would have been compelled to admit that he had made highly offensive remarks concerning Premier Mussolini of Italy. If the court-martial had been held, it would have been incumbent upon him to justify those remarks or plead guilty to charges that would have involved a heavy penalty. The ventilation of the incident, with the usual sensational publicity, might have caused even greater embarrassment than the original offense. It is best for all concerned that a reprimand be substituted for a court-martial.

Naturally, the incident should be valuable in reminding all officers wearing the uniform of the United States that liberty of speech affecting international relations is not one of their prerogatives.

CUBAN CONDITIONS.

Notwithstanding the continued suspension of constitutional guarantees in Cuba, the resumption of publication of certain newspapers and the release of certain agitators indicate that the government is disposed to exercise its powers as leniently as the demands of public order will permit. In enforcing public order President Machado is performing his first duty to his country. The Cuban Ambassador to the United States, Dr. Orestes Ferrara, gives assurance in a radio address that tranquillity reigns throughout Cuba and that civil life is normal. There is discontent, arising from economic stress, "but this economic condition," he pointedly remarks, "does not affect Cuba alone. The world at large is suffering from the same unfortunate malady."

Dr. Ferrara alludes to the world agreement relating to the production of sugar, which is expected to "avoid the excess of production which is glutting the market and causing present low prices, which are below the cost of production." This language, if applied to the wheat surplus, would explain the cause of discontent among American farmers. By promoting diversification of products and industries Cuba is doing much to counteract the sugar depression. The country is now exporting paints, shoes, dry goods and agricultural products in competition with other exporting countries.

A good source of income for Cuba is tourist travel, which has been encouraged by the building of automobile highways through regions of scenic beauty, and by providing modern hotels, theaters, &c., in Havana and elsewhere. The rich colonial memorials have been preserved and made accessible. More than 100,000 tourists visit Cuba annually. During fifteen days in December last 16,000 tourists were taken to Havana in fourteen ocean liners. Americans are finding in Cuba a delightful near-by retreat from strenuous everyday life.

RELIEF HELD UP BY CONGRESS.

The chief business of Congress in the short session is the enactment of appropriation bills. Funds must be appropriated or the activities of the Government can not be carried on. During this relatively short period Congress is called upon to scrutinize a budget calling for the expenditure of approximately $4,000,000,000. Yet Congress is dallying with innumerable minor issues while action on the appropriation bills is postponed.

These measures are of unusual importance this year because they carry millions of dollars for public works that will create jobs and stimulate business. The bill providing $116,000,000 for construction work and the drought relief measure were only part of the administration's program for improvement of the economic situation. Every one of the appropriation bills is loaded with items that will furnish additional employment. For the most part these funds are made immediately available.

Enactment of the Interior Department supply bill has been held up because the Democrats in the Senate insisted on attaching to it a rider to provide a Federal dole for the drought-stricken and the unemployed. This bill would make approximately $25,000,000 available for improvements in twenty different States, in addition to authorizing routine expenditures of the department. Immediate relief to thousands of men out of work might have been provided. By holding up this measure in an attempt to commit the administration to the dole system the Senate coalition has defeated the very cause to which it gives lip service.

The Senate has also held up the Postoffice-Treasury bill, which likewise contains provisions calculated to stimulate business activity. Other measures await action in the House, in the Senate and in conference. Only one financial measure, the deficiency bill, has been sent to the President. Even this one, which provides nearly $60,000,000 for buildings, roads, naval developments, &c., was delayed for a long period while Congress wrangled over politics, nominations and bills of minor importance.

Every one of the appropriation bills must now be considered an emergency measure. They should have been so considered at the beginning of the session. Congress has frittered away more than two months of the short session and less than four weeks remain in which to accomplish a major part of its work.

Since Congress has drifted almost aimlessly for two months, the insurgents are now in an excellent position to force an extra session. Besides stifling business expansion, an extra session would mean further delay in the enactment of these emergency appropriation bills and the creation of work for the workless. Congress ought not to allow its attention to be diverted to any other matter until every appropriation measure has been sent to the President.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

By OLIVER M'KEE, JR., in the Boston Transcript.

In 1932, the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington will be the occasion for a notable celebration. As one of its contributions to the event, the Library of Congress is now engaged in binding the papers of George Washington, in 302 volumes. The papers came originally from the State Department, and they have never been bound. What the library now proposes to do is to publish them in the only form in which any institution of learning would be glad to have them; that is, bound in leather. Only a part of the papers will be printed by the bicentennial commission.

The library plans to publish also the remaining unpublished volumes of the Journals of the Continental Congress, four in all, Nos. 30, 31, 32 and 33. Over twenty-five years ago, the originals of the Journals of the Continental Congress were turned over to the custody of the library. The work of printing began in 1904, and it has proceeded as fast as the funds available would permit. Twenty-seven volumes have so far been printed. In the words of Herbert Putnam, "this is not merely one of the most useful publications for the historian and legislator that has ever been issued by the Government, but is indispensable to save the wear and tear on the original." The edition will consist of 2,000 copies, and each member of Congress receives a copy of the successive volumes as they come from the press.

The publication of these records is of particular advantage for two reasons, if for no other. In the first place, by publishing them in full, library officials will henceforth be in a position to prevent visiting scholars from poring over the originals, which officials in charge believe should be kept "sacredly intact." In the second place, while the originals could only be consulted in one place, here in Washington, in the future the records will receive a world-wide distribution. Says Dr. Putnam: "This is one of the finest achievements in the way of contribution in the field of history that any Government establishment has ever accomplished."

Still another undertaking of similar interest is the publication of the records of the Virginia Company. In this, the library has been fortunate in having the scholarly help, contributed gratis, of Prof. Kingsbury, of Bryn Mawr. These are rated as one of the important records of source material in American history. Nobody curiously enough knows just how they came into possession of the library, but they came there many years ago from the Capitol. The Virginia Company threw as much light on the relations of the mother country with the colonies as any other document. Dr. Putnam pays high tribute to the help he has received from Prof. Kingsbury:

"Prof. Kingsbury, of Bryn Mawr, undertook to edit that for us, gave her services, and the result was that we were able to get out these two very splendid volumes, which constitute a superb achievement by the Government Printing Office, not costing in proportion to its bibliographic distinction, and constitutes one of the most distinguished publications ever issued by any Government establishment. It did more to carry the repute of the library to the learned institutions and in the field of connoisseurship than almost anything we have done.

"Those two first volumes covering the records themselves, competently edited and edited without cost to us, were published. Associated with them, however, for the study of them, should be numerous other original documents which Miss Kingsbury has collected in England and of which she supplied us with copies. For the study of these associated documents you would have a whole block of source material for American history, of paramount importance."

The National Library thus continues to shed new luster on American scholarship. Its facilities, and its collections make it increasingly a workshop for the scholars of all lands. The thirty-two years during which Dr. Putnam has presided over its destinies have been a period of steady development for the library, and of an ever broadening appreciation on the part of the world of scholarship without.

OLDEST CHIEF RETIRES.

The Nation's veteran firefighter, George A. Wallace, of Cleveland, according to the Ohio State Journal, has retired on pension at the age of 82, after 62 years of service in uniform, the last 30 years as chief of the department. Despite his age he personally directed his department in all downtown fires to the date of his retirement. He holds a national, probably a world, record for length of service. Cleveland has honored him as its fire chief emeritus.

There are such men in the public service. They were fortunate in finding their place early and able to keep step with the world in all its progress. LOSSES.

What are losses anyway?
Where's the man can truly say
Loss of money which he had
Is inevitably bad?
Poor it leaves the purse, but oh,
It may help the man to grow,
It may help him to attain
Infinitely richer gain.

Loss of health is worse by far
Than our money losses are.
Loss of honor, loss of will,
Loss of courage, loss of skill,
Loss of friends and loss of wit
Leave a mortal badly hit.
Men who still these joys retain
Place and fortune may regain.

Failure's temporary sting
With it greater joy may bring,
It may rouse a man to find
Hidden powers of heart and mind.
It may stir within his breast
Strength of which he'd never guessed.
He may gain new splendors, which
He'd have lost by staying rich.

Will Rogers Is the Most Popular American Because He Is Like One of the Family.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE art of "selling" yourself to the world consists almost wholly in taking advantage of the ancient truth that like attracts like.

Paul's scheme of being all things to all men had the wisdom of divine inspiration. Among the lowly, he was an humble follower of the Nazarene; before the proud Roman he was an equally proud citizen of the empire.

Do you wonder at times why certain men hold public office? It is because they are much like their constituents. The voters favored the candidate who was most like themselves. They understood him. He talked their language. They trusted him. And thus it is that a United States senator, for example, now serves as a composite picture of the majority in his State.

The most successful magazine editors are the ones who think most like the crowd. Their greatness consists in their commonness. They buy the stories and articles they enjoy reading, and their magazines sell to millions because the ordinary people who compose the majority have tastes much like theirs.

You read in go-getter articles that a young man must be different and stand out from the crowd if he would succeed.

There isn't a word of truth in it. The world suspects and hates or fears those who are different. To be unlike the crowd is to walk a lonely way. The genius stands aloof because he can't help himself. He was born to be different, and to pay the penalty of loneliness.

The ordinary man enjoys being with the crowd, unless hard knocks have made him bitter or success and money have made him foolishly vain, and he must keep the crowd with him if he would make himself a success.

The lowly Carpenter, most influential man in all history, was crucified by the "upper class." The common people heard Him gladly, as common people have ever since, and if those who sweat for their bread had then enjoyed the power they now possess, they would have made Him ruler of their world.

You must be one with the people to win the support of the people. I once knew a merchant in a small town who failed merely because he persisted in using precise English that seemed to rebuke the careless speech of his neighbors.

In Rome you must do as the Romans do if you expect orders or invitations to dinner.

You may demonstrate your superior education by using big words, but nobody ever won a following that way.

Hurley and Second Place.

(Houston Post-Dispatch.)

These rumors that Secretary Hurley of the War Department has found favor in the Hoover eyes as a running mate on the Republican ticket in 1932 are interesting because they are supported by logic, if not yet by fact.

It is no secret that Hurley is a favorite with the President. When Secretary Good died, shortly after the administration began, Mr. Hoover was sorely grieved. Good had been his close personal friend and had been highly useful in bringing the Middle West into the Hoover fold in 1928. In line with his policy of promoting subordinates when the way opens, the President promoted the Assistant Secretary of War to be head of the department when the Secretary died. Since Hurley took charge, everything has run smoothly, and the young Oklahoman has demonstrated his ability as an executive. There is no denying that he has made a good Secretary of War.

Southern Democrats Still Dry.

In these days of the triumphant war dance of the wets it has come to be believed that everybody, even the Southern Democracy, has gone wet. But United States Senator Cameron Morrison, of North Carolina, says the Democracy of the South has not gone wet and that the prohibitionists of the South are not without the courage to resist the attempt to make the Democratic party stand for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. He says that they are ready to fight for their principles.

Another Futile Gesture.

(Atlanta Constitution.)

Several propositions have been submitted to Congress by its members for taking a referendum vote in the States on forms of prohibition repeal, modification, or substitution. None of them carry any appeal to a rational solution of the present vexing problems growing out of the prohibition laws.

One of the latest is by Representative Lehlbach, of New Jersey, who wants to submit a referendum to State conventions elected to consider prohibition reforms. But how are those conventions to be had upon anything short of another constitutional amendment? Congress has no authority to command the people of any State to hold a moot convention on some measure pending before the National Legislature.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Farmers Would Pay Huge Extra Price for Gasoline if Oil Embargo Were Applied.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who attended all hearings on Senator Capper's bill to embargo imports of all fuel oil and all gasoline and to limit the importation of crude oil to 20 per cent of importations of 1926, I am surprised at the senator's letter published this morning.

Senator Capper was present at all hearings and must have learned that his statement that imported oil is produced by foreigners and "cheap foreign labor" is not correct. The hearings were held to discover the facts. Senator Capper now knows:

1. That 90 per cent of all imported oils are produced by American companies.

2. That all these companies employ only American labor, drilling for, producing, handling and transporting oils, and pay much higher wages than in the United States.

3. That American seamen on American tankers bring the oils here. In short, that the industry of producing oil for American import is just as American as the production of oils in Kansas; and that his embargo bill is directed against this American industry—a castigation undeserved.

He must know from the statement of Mr. McTarnahan, representing only one of the hundreds of different industries using fuel oil on the Atlantic seaboard, that his business alone will be forced to lay off 125,000 men if the embargo prevails. Senator Capper quite properly is working to give employment to 100,000 oil-field workers said to be unemployed. Mr. Requa testified that the embargo would in all probability not reemploy these men, but it would certainly put out of work three or four times as many now employed in our Atlantic States and on our steamships. It would rob a vast army of workers of their jobs and probably not reemploy the oil-field workers. The oil barred by embargo can be produced ten times over by opening the valves on the over-producing pinched-in wells of today.

Do the people of Kansas in fact want this embargo? Senator Capper admits the measure is for increased prices. Farmers will pay a tremendous percentage of the increase. There are, according to the last figures of the American Petroleum Institute, only 315,000 acres of producing and probable-producing oil land out of a total of 52,335,000 acres in Kansas—one-half of 1 per cent of the State's area. The farmers of this insignificant stretch may perhaps profit from royalties, but for the most part they have sold their rights to the speculators known as royalty owners. The farmers of the remaining 99½ per cent of the area of Kansas operate 207,800 motor vehicles and will be chastised by an increase of price of their gasoline to the benefit of somebody.

Senator Capper also learned that there are 665,000,000 barrels of all oil now in storage; that this is nearly a year's supply; that it is owned by the "big companies," that his bill would immediately increase the value to those companies by from $700,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. This unearned increment we consumers—all Americans—would pay to these big companies long before any benefit could possibly accrue to his friends, the oil producers of one-half of 1 per cent of his State.

Traffic Jumble Calls for Ruling Out Parking in Congested Areas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't know whether Parker Williams is right in his motor-subways solution of downtown traffic congestion, but I do think he calls the turn when he says that we are faced by "a motor impasse against which the effect of minor regulations is not particularly noticeable."

Take the moving-picture blocks of F street, for instance. Frequently you will find them filled with long strings of automobiles, parked as well as in motion, which unnecessarily interfere with legitimate traffic. At times there will be plain citizens who should have taken a less congested route to their destinations; the lady driver with the strained look; the live wire weaving in and out to save a split second of wasted time, not to mention the cigarette girl and her boy friend, and college kids in rusty racers.

It is a dead sure thing that this combination is going to get worse if nothing is done to break it up.

My suggestion is that no parking be permitted in such areas as that described, and that traffic be limited strictly to business vehicles. At least such an arrangement would give the experts a simple base on which to build up a safe and sane system instead of trying to patch up some jerry-built makeshift out of the present traffic jumble.

Valuable Suggestions for Getting Rid of Washington Monument as a Menace to Fliers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well! Well! Well! I see the aviators are complaining that the Washington Monument is a menace to them. Now that's too bad; let's see what we can do about it.

How about moving the Monument to some low out-of-the-way place where it will not be a menace to these boys? Or since we are cutting down everything else, why not cut the Monument down to conform to our building regulations? Call in our engineers to draw up plans for cutting the Monument in half, and put on hinges like a drawbridge, so that the top half may be let down with the apex pointing to the ground. This would be done each night to permit these night boys to fly without danger. In the morning pull the top part of the Monument up in place, and we are all set for the day.

This job could be started at once and would be a great help in making work for the unemployed. Let Engineer Grant and his boys get to work.

TRADE RALLY HOLDS, DESPITE SOFT SPOTS

Recovery Has Lost Some of Its Vigor, but Individual Gains Stand Out.

COMMODITIES STILL SAG

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—If business has rounded the corner—and many leaders in finance and industry are convinced that it has—the reports of the past week merely indicate that the road to recovery has its rough spots.

Statistics covering the latter part of January and early February show that the business recovery has lost some of the vigor so marked in the first two weeks of the new year. Further signs of improvement, however, are not wanting, and it is recalled that even the more optimistic of the new year's forecasts stressed the point that recovery would be uneven and slow in its initial stages.

Such industries as steel, automobile manufacturing and textiles are holding their gains, and there has been a further improvement in spots. Steel ingot production was estimated last week at 48 per cent of capacity, against 47 a week earlier. The textile industry has been helped by the early date of Easter this year, and style shows have stimulated buying of spring fabrics.

Weather Aiding Sales of Autos.

The stepping up of motor production has proceeded gradually, in the aggregate. The open weather has helped retail sales of automobiles, but has in turn, with its unseasonably high temperatures, had a rather depressing effect upon sales of heavy apparel and related lines. A sign of keen competition in the low-priced motor field appeared in Ford Motor Co.'s increases in its dealer discount to a flat 22 per cent, from the previous graduated scale ranging from 17½ to 21 per cent.

The building industry has in the main continued to lag, despite some improvements in residential construction. While contracts let in January usually show a small decrease from December, a substantially larger than usual decline from the previous month is indicated by preliminary estimates.

The large amount of projected public works has not made itself felt as yet, as actual work on such projects is usually slow in developing. A temporary setback in the bond market during the past fortnight may have delayed necessary financing.

Disappointing News Cited.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended January 24, were a little disappointing, and electric power production as estimated for the last week of January compared with the past two years less favorably than the earlier weeks of the month. Seasonal trends would indicate a better showing in the movement of revenue freight during the earlier portion of February. Electric power output may have been affected by unseasonably warm weather in the Middle West.

Commodity prices have continued to sag. Both Dun's and Bradstreet's indices indicate a drop of more than 2 per cent in January. The Annalist's latest weekly index showed the widest drop since the middle of December, reflecting decreases in farm products and textiles. Nonferrous metals were also under pressure. Copper was reduced to 9½ cents, the low level of last autumn, and bar silver dropped to still another historical low.

Total bank clearings continue to run more than 20 per cent below a year ago, but in view of a drop of between 15 and 20 per cent in commodity prices, as variously estimated, and the shrinkage in security values, a substantial volume of business seems to be indicated.

Crucible Steel Earnings Lower in 1930 Report

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Net earnings of Crucible Steel Co. for 1930 were $454,223 less than the annual dividend payments, the annual report issued today disclosed. Net profit for the year was $4,045,122, and dividend disbursements during the year totaled $4,499,346. In 1929 the company had net profit of $9,162,344, equal to $11.58 a share on the common stock.

The Endicott Johnson Corporation for 1930 reported net profits of $765,-167, equal to 14 cents a share on the common stock, against $2,771,563, or $5.01 a share in 1929.

NEW 1931 PEAK REACHED

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The financial markets recovered from the unsettling influences of the soldier bonus controversy last week, and while bonds recovered about half their losses, shares pushed up to the best average level of the new year.

Business news indicated some hesitancy in the recovery which was so marked early in January, and the stock market adopted a policy of watchful waiting during most of the week. Trading came close to a standstill on numerous occasions. What looked like a concerted drive against the bears gave the list a vigorous boost in the final session, however.

Paris Considers Loans.

International bankers are hoping that the investment market will soon reach a condition favorable to the resumption of foreign financing. They explain that the concentration of gold in New York and Paris makes it incumbent that both cities develop international capital markets to aid in the restoration of world economic conditions. In modern times France has never been an important capital market internationally, but in the postwar period New York assumed an importance previously enjoyed only by London.

With the Bank of England's gold stock reduced to only about one-fourth that of France, and less than an eighth that of the United States, London is severely handicapped as a world banker. Paris now has under consideration some minor foreign loans.

The stock market made a net gain of only 3.3 points, as measured by the price index of 90 shares and most of that was recorded in the bear retreat in the last hour of trading on Saturday.

Movement Is Encouraging.

The stock exchanges' monthly figures on the total market valuation of all listed shares indicated that as of February 1, total borrowings to support marginal accounts amounted to only 3 1-3 per cent of the total market value of shares. This compared with 5¾ per cent a year previously, and indicated that the market was on a cash basis more thoroughly than at any time in years, certainly more thoroughly than at any time since comparable statistics have been compiled.

The ability of the list to break into new high ground was encouraging, as it had been repulsed several times as it approached its previous best level of the new year, and it was feared that a considerable volume of stock may be hanging over the market. The list has not yet gone far enough into new high ground to provide any very conclusive testimony on that point, but its action was at least of good omen.

BONDS RECOVERING FROM BONUS THREAT

Market Is Still Improving With U. S. Governments Leading List.

OUTLOOK BETTER ABROAD

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The bond market spent last week recovering from the body blow dealt it by the precipitate decline in United States Governments.

While a glance at the prices prevailing at the end of the week revealed that the market was still convalescent, the resumption of the advance, which was making good progress when rudely interrupted by the soldiers' bonus threat, caused the financial community to utter an audible sigh of relief.

The course of bonds was reversed Tuesday after beginning the week by reaching new lows for the year. The chameleon-like swiftness with which sentiment changed was attributed entirely to developments in the controversy over the cash redemption of soldiers' insurance certificates.

Bonus Threat Lessens.

First reports indicated a $3,400,-000,000 bond issue might be necessary, and investors, visualizing demoralization of the bond market, liquidated Government securities so insistently that they dropped as much as 3 points or more.

The upturn did not come until Wall street felt that the united opposition of banking and industrial leaders to the proposal had impressed Congress and that if a bonus was authorized it would involve a much smaller sum.

The recovery of United States Governments, which continued throughout the week, was vigorous and wiped out half of the decline. Buyers of domestic corporation bonds took heart and investment issues became firm, the daily fractional advances removing most of the traces of the sympathetic liquidation.

Standstill Almost Reached.

After setting a high mark in January, new financing came almost to a standstill last week. Investment houses originating bond issues hesitated to offer loans with the situation clouded by the bonus proposals and capital emissions for the week totaled only $21,000,000, of which $15,000,-000 was in one offering for a Canadian utility concern.

IF DR. EINSTEIN is right, and space is "curved," then the future inhabitants of this globe are in for some old-fashioned radio entertainment some 500,000,000,000 years from now. For "curved space" means that every radio program will, years hence, return to the earth, after having made the circuit of the universe, declared O. H. Caldwell, former member of the Federal Radio Commission, addressing the Radio Club of Chicago.

"The only discouraging thing about these 'Einstein encores' is the long wait that will be necessary," Mr. Caldwell said. "Sir James Jeans, distinguished British astronomer, computes that 500,000,000,000 years is the time required for electric magnetic waves to make the round trip to the ends of space and to return to their starting point."

WALTER DAMROSCH will act as master of ceremonies for a special program of French music which the alumni of the American Conservatory of Music will give at Fontainbleau, France, this afternoon (WRC, 3 p. m.).

Senator S. M. Shortridge, Republican, and Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democrat, will tell what their respective parties have done for women, while Maud Younger, National Woman's Party, will tell what remains to be done (WRC, 8:15 p. m.).

WTIC, Hartford, will celebrate its sixth anniversary with a special program, commencing 10:30 a. m. today and lasting until 3:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Nikolai Orloff, pianist, will be soloist with a symphony orchestra on Wednesday evening (WMAL, 10:30 p. m.).

A BROADCAST appropriate to Lincoln's Birthday Thursday, will be a personally conducted tour through the house where Lincoln died, across the street from Ford's Theater. Lewis G. Reynolds, custodian, will describe the tragic incidents connected with Lincoln's death.

"He Knew Lincoln" will be recited by Edgar White Burrill for the tenth consecutive year on Wednesday (WJZ network, 8:30 p. m.).

Little Jack Little was born in London and was sent to the London Conservatory of Music when but 4 years old. However, the family left England when he was 9 and settled in Waterloo, Iowa, where he grew up an American boy.

DESPITE the theory advanced that faulty radio receivers and not the Police Department transmitter is to blame, complaints continue to come to The Post.

"I gather that the new police broadcasting station is causing much disturbance to radio reception of WRC," writes C. E. Currier. "It is quite a nuisance and no reason has been advanced as to why it was necessary to adopt a frequency a harmonic of which comes in with WRC."

Dr. Mary B. Harris, superintendent of the Federal Institution for Women, will be guest speaker on the Radio Home-Makers' Club this morning (WMAL, 11 a. m.).

King George broadcasts through a golden microphone.

THERE is a report that the Pope will be heard twice during the program from the Vatican City Thursday. The first address in Latin at the radio station will formally inaugurate direct radio communication with the rest of the world.

The second broadcast will be in Italian from the pontifical headquarters in the academy nearby.

Gen. Jacob S. Coxey, commander of "Coxey's Army," so famous years ago, is to speak tonight, (WJSV 7 p. m.).

Dare Interprets the MODE

A chic little coat of blue wool belted in kid and buttoned in gallilith. (Courtesy of the Maison Heim, Paris.)

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Talk about the short-skirted tube dress having been youthful, and women giving up this flattering mode reluctantly—nothing could be more youthful or gayer than the new idea in tailored suits that Paris is all agog over for spring and summer!

It is, the tailored suit with a skirt and a jacket of a different color, actually a different color, my darlings, not just a different shade of the same color. Excepting when the skirt is a flat color and the jacket a plaid or a mixture that somehow goes with the skirt, it's usually as definitely different as a black skirt with a turquoise blue jacket or a beige skirt with a red jacket, or for summer resort wear, white linen skirt with a vivid green jacket.

That's for skirts and blouses, the new color idea in tailored suits. But there's an even newer and more interesting idea in the separate jacket of a decidedly contrasting color that is worn with a one-piece dress. That is something youthifying and chic, yet at the same time elegant!

Can this possibly be coincident with economy? I'm positive that it was not intended so, but it certainly fits in to wardrobe economy perfectly. It doesn't take a great deal of clothes sense to see how stunning a red silk faille jacket would be with a dressy black satin afternoon ensemble and how it would become a completely new outfit with a simple red faille skirt, or be a tailored suit with a beige serge skirt, now does it?

The Queen of Hearts is having a Valentine's party, and making every single bit of the decorations herself herself * * * and what's more, they are costing her hardly anything at all; because you see, she is sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the leaflet telling her exactly how to go about making all decorations herself, as well as her own costume, which is very droll and cunning, and made out of such things as cotton ermine and gold oilcloth and purple sateen.

If you're either giving a party or going to one, you had certainly better send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post, for this leaflet telling you how to make this Queen of Hearts costume or make all the decorations for the Queen of Hearts party.

* * * *

These new little garments that are neither coats nor suits, nor coat dresses, but give an effect of either one or the other, are simply delightful. You can see what I mean in the garment I have sketched for you today from Heim, which looks like a suit from the back, like a coat or a coat dress from the front and like a one-piece dress from any side at all. It was in blue woolen, one of the lighter shades that are popular for spring, and had darker blue buttons and a leather belt.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Dawdling at Table.

Children sometimes dawdle over their food when they do not actually lack a normal appetite, and when there is apparently nothing in the attitude of the family to account for this behavior.

One cause for this sort of trouble is the presence of all sorts of distractions from the business of eating.

The meals are perhaps served in a nursery where toys are lying all about, or the children may be permitted to bring them to table with them.

Naturally, the toys compete with the food for the children's interest. To an alert, active child, the toys are often much the more attractive of the two.

This same type of child, when seated at the table with the older members of the family, is apt to be so interested in their conversation and so eager to do his share of the talking that he forgets to eat.

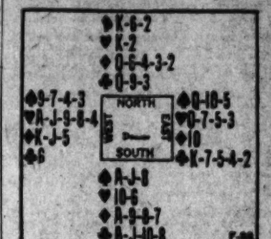
A child who has shown this tendency may well be served his meal alone for a while, in a room where there is little or no activity or conversation.

His horizon should be limited to the food before him. He should understand that this is not the time for play or talk, that when he has finished his meal, and not before, he can return to the toys which have been put carefully out of sight.

It may take the child a few days to readjust himself to the new regime, but if a negative attitude has not been previously built up toward the eating situation, and if there is no genuine lack of appetite, this way of dealing with the difficulty will usually be effective.

WORK ON BRIDGE

WHEN NOT TO LEAD A LONG SUIT.



With the above hand at Auction Bridge, South would bid one No Trump, and there would be no other bid unless North thought it advisable to pre-empt by bidding two No Trumps.

When the hand was played at Contract, South's one No Trump was jumped to two by North and rebid by South. It was a moderately close question whether West should have bid his Hearts. If he had done so, he might have caused North to shift to Diamonds; and whether North and South would have bid as far as five Diamonds is uncertain, although that declaration could have been made.

If South had opened with one Club instead of one No Trump, any number of variations might have ensued because West then would have bit 1 Heart; and North, with only the King and one Heart, might have tried Diamonds or assisted Clubs.

The hand was played at three No Trumps and West led the Eight of Hearts, North played the King, but although it won the Declarer still had his troubles. He knew that the adversaries would save game if they won a trick before he took nine; so he could not afford to lead the Diamond suit of which he had nine cards because there was no way to shut out the combination of King, Jack and Ten in the adverse hands. His only chance was to dig seven tricks out of his seven-card Club suit and his six-card Spade suit. That scheme could be worked if East held both the King of Clubs and the Queen of Spades.

Declarer led dummy's Nine of Clubs to trick 2, South playing the Eight. When that won, the Queen of Clubs followed and it made no difference whether East covered with the King or not. If he did not, the Queen won and a third Club was led for a third finesse. If the King covered either the first or second Club lead, South's four Clubs were established.

With the Club danger passed, Declarer next had to risk the Spades. A small Spade was led, won with North's King and a Spade returned for South's Jack to finesse. The Spade venture being successful, Declarer captured the game by having been lucky enough to find the Ace of Hearts where he wanted it and to win two finesses.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"AQUARIUS."

IF February 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 5:30 p. m. to 7 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and from 2:30 p. m. to 4 p. m.

Something out of the ordinary will happen on this date, the result of a decision made, or change undertaken two or four years ago. The influences favor entertaining, and the lighter side of things generally. Old friendships dropped and new ones made.

The child born on this February 9 will have an original mind, strong convictions and ability for business pursuits. It will be fond of the company of few and will loyally stick to its pals. Despondency is the unkindest trait which nature has given it.

Born on a February 9, you have been given a high heart and a strong will, sovereign remedies for the unkind blows of fate, and the best equipment for taking advantage of any favorable tide of fortune. You are serious about life without being sad. Solemnity and gloom are the trappings of the timorous and the inefficient, and you are neither of these. You have a mind of your own, and although you are not loath to listen to advice, you are not swayed by every one who counsels you. You seldom make excuses for yourself, although you generously excuse others for their shortcomings. You are quick to pull yourself up when you feel you are slipping in an undesirable way.

You are a stickler for punctuality, and you would as soon steal a penny as another's time. You are particular about remembering and applying the little, but none the less important, courtesies of life, in your fellow relationships. You are too sincere to be a flatterer, but too kindly and diplomatic to be rude or hurtful. Your discriminative faculties are well developed, and you ably judge human nature. You choose, and enjoy, friends arising from every walk of life, and such a cosmopolitan mixture of associates has broadened your views, and given you a liberal education. You learn from the "man in the street." You are inquisitive for interesting information.

Successful people born February 9:

William King, the first Governor of Maine—"the Sultan of Bath."

William H. Harrison, ninth President of United States.

William T. Sampson, naval officer.

Nathan Goff, jr., Secretary of the Navy under Hayes.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Unhappy Wife.

DEAR FRances McDonald: I hardly know how or what to write, there is so much I would like to tell you and ask you.

My husband is 36 and I am 25; we have been married a little more than two years. Until about six months ago I have been happy—he says he never has and never expects to be. He is the type who worries over everything and nothing most of the time. I am always ready to smile or look on the bright side of everything. I sometimes think he doesn't like to see me happy. I do everything I can to please him, and yet I seem to fail. I have even tried doing just the opposite, and it all seems to have the same effect on him. I do not nag or do anything to worry him when he comes in from work, as I realize a man is tired and worn out after working all day.

I do everything—pay all bills, rent, taxes, buy plates for his car, even wash the car, as he won't; and fire the furnace, mow the lawn and everything else that should be done, therefore he shouldn't have any worries.

He doesn't make a very good salary—only $24 a week, so I take boarders and roomers to help pay for our home, otherwise there would be no home. The roomers are my two sisters and three girl friends whom we have known most of our lives. When I took them it was perfectly agreeable to him, otherwise I would never have done so. I don't know what I would do if it were not for my sisters sometimes, as he goes for weeks and never speaks to me, and if I ask him what is wrong he says "nothing," or ignores me in everything I do or say.

About two months ago he got up one night, dressed, got a small automatic he had given me several years ago, and started to leave. I asked where he was going and what he was going to do, and he said he didn't know. I finally talked him out of leaving, but he did the same thing about a week later. I believe he just tries to scare me, and I am beginning to dislike him and am almost tempted to leave him. Should I?

I don't want to give up my home, but I feel now that we can't go on as we are. Help me if you can.

KAY.

Your husband should be examined by a competent physician. There is something decidedly wrong. Tell your parents and your family physician all that you have told me and follow the advice the doctor offers. Meanwhile, put the automatic in a safe place. Give it to your father. The fact that he would even attempt to terrify you is evidence enough that he needs competent supervision.

Do not discuss the matter with him, but with those in a position to advise and assist you. And do not delay this action.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

Scotch Shortbread.

(United States Department of Agriculture.)

Justly famed for its delicious flavor, Scotch shortbread is often imported to serve with afternoon tea or beverages of any sort, or with fruit for dessert. In the present state of the butter market, which is at its lowest price level in several years, it will pay the housewife to make some shortbread herself for home consumption. If carefully stored in a moderately cool place and in a tight container it will keep crisp and good-flavored for several weeks. The recipe is from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Scotch Shortbread.

3½ cups sifted flour.
1 cup butter.
½ cup sugar.
¼ teaspoon salt.

Sift the flour, salt and sugar on a bread board. Break the butter into small pieces and work into the dry ingredients by pressing with the palm of the hand and the wrist until there is a smooth, even mixture. Make the dough into a ball and roll out about three-fourths of an inch thick. Prick well with a fork and place in a pan with high sides to prevent the shortbread from browning too quickly around the edges. Bake in a very moderate oven, at a temperature between 275 or 300 degrees Fahrenheit for 35 minutes, or until a pale amber tint. Allow shortbread to stand an hour or two before serving, so that it becomes crisp and thoroughly set. Then break it into small pieces and serve.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

WE MUST HAVE PERENNIALS.

WHILE we appreciate the necessity of annuals and the common bedding plants such as geraniums and begonias, we know that if we were to depend on these alone our garden plots would be like Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard, quite bare, for a long time in the spring. For this reason, and because these plants die quite early in the fall, we must plant a large proportion of our garden with suitable herbaceous plants. By giving much space along borders and through shrubbery groups to this class of plants, your garden becomes not only beautiful at all seasons, but you have the satisfaction of knowing that it is permanent. If these hardy plants, combined with suitable shrubbery, are judiciously planted, less labor will be required and more satisfactory results will be obtained.

These hardy herbaceous plants, when carefully selected, can be planted so as to insure a continued show of bloom the entire summer. They commence to grow very early in the spring, so that the entire garden is soon a mass of young growth, and usually by the time the grass is ready for the first mowing, the beds are in bloom. With the addition of a few hardy bulbs, blooms will be assured as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

Let me urge, therefore, that those who never have undertaken the culture of hardy herbaceous plants make the start this spring with a few easily grown varieties, and gradually increase their stock and collection from time to time. Even if your space is limited to the usual city back yard, plant one or two varieties. You will never regret it.

In selecting varieties do not confine your choice to all spring bloomers. If you do, by the middle of July your flowers will be over and you will have to depend for bloom upon summer bedding plants and annuals entirely.

YOUR NAME

IT MEAN? WHAT DOES

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Higgs" is one of the many shortened forms of the personal name "Richard." It has come about because of a strange, yet popular tendency among English-speaking people to adopt new forms of names simply because they rhyme with forms which have previously existed. Thus "Richard" gave "Rick," "Higginson" seems to be first recorded in 1852. A certain Alicia Rykyn is mentioned in an English document which appeared in the last quarter of the fourteenth century.

The family name "Scholl" is of German origin. It means "the oled" or "the lump of earth," and was first given as a nickname to farmers. It appears to be first recorded in a German document of the year 1319.

The personal name "Amy" is ultimately of Latin origin, and means "beloved."

Watch this column every day. Your name will appear here.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The clamor roused by the administration's former efforts to remove Gen. Wood from the public gaze was as nothing to the tumult which greeted the culminating humiliation of his separation from the Eighty-ninth division. It was not the act alone, but the callous brutality of the manner which aroused the public resentment. The administration's staunchest supporters in the press this time joined in the protest. The New York World declared that the incident would "give every fair-minded man a bad taste in the mouth." The New York Times called the administration sharply to account. The Nation could win the war without Gen. Wood, said the New York Tribune, but it could not win unless the Government were willing to utilize all of the Nation's resources in materials, ideas and men.

Newspapers spoke of the "Wood mystery;" but nowhere did there seem to be doubt that Wood was being "repressed" for his courage and outspokenness. There were ironic comments on the President's declaration that politics were "adjourned." Was it possible that it was Republican politics to which the President referred? The South made itself heard in no uncertain terms.

Deluged by Protests.

The President and the Secretary of War were deluged with protests by wire and by mail, among them a telegram from four mothers in Ellsworth, Kans., "respectfully" praying that "if possible you allow Gen. Wood to lead our sons to battle in France." Senators and representatives spoke their minds.

When the storm showed no signs of abating, the administration took refuge in its customary technique. No "definite official announcement" could be made as yet, but it could be "stated authoritatively" that the plan to place Gen. Wood in charge of American forces on the Italian front was under consideration. Indeed, before the orders separating Wood from his division had been announced, the President and the Secretary of War had had in mind the plan "to utilize Gen. Wood's services in Italy." The "tentative plan" to assign Wood to command the Western Department "implied only temporary duty," the War Department not having "sufficiently rounded out" its plan of campaign for Italy to be ready to name the man who was to be in charge of it.

Nothing definite, nothing categorical; nothing a "high official" could not later ignore or repudiate. A column on front pages, in Washington, New York and elsewhere. No starved reporter's pipe-dream; but the utterance of an administration dodging and back-trailing because it was too timid to be frank.

But the statement was only imperfectly effective. When, after four days, the storm showed no signs of subsiding, the administration permitted one more semiofficial emanation to go forth across the troubled waters. It followed a method which the President had found successful in connection with his plea for the repeal of the Panama tolls act. The War Department could not explain matters without embarrassing the Government diplomatically, but there was no intention whatever of "shelving" Gen. Wood. Three things were made clear, first, that the President intended to utilize the "valuable services" of Gen. Wood in a manner best suited to the interests of the Nation; second, that Wood was being held in the United States for the present because the administration, for "particular reasons which officials are not free to explain," required his special services; third, that Gen. Wood might later go to Italy in command of American forces there or receive an important command in France.

Wood Called "Satisfied."

Besides Secretary Baker, ran the story, a number of general staff officers, a few diplomats, Cabinet officers and Gen. Wood himself, all had "a pretty clear idea" why Wood was "temporarily held in reserve." There was, in fact, no diversity of opinion regarding the wisdom of the administration in keeping Wood in the United States at that time. It was "understood," indeed, that Wood himself fully appreciated the situation and was satisfied to stay. All he wanted was assurance that he would ultimately see service in the field, and, if he remained longer in the United States, he wanted livelier work than the command of the Western department.

But that was not all. The anonymous official who was responsible for this remarkable apologia was not only smart; he had imagination and eloquence. Under certain circumstances, the Government might have very urgent use for Wood's services. Whether Wood went to Italy or France was not of immediate importance, but it was important to know that he was within easy reach until certain matters which—hush!—were "not altogether satisfactory to this Government," were cleared up. Teuton handiwork in Mexico was giving the administration much more concern than the public realized.

"Suppose, officials say," ran the story in the New York Sun, "that the neutrality which First Chief Carranza has managed to keep stabilized in Mexico should become overthrown by German intrigue, which works now with uncanny cunning. Suppose German influence managed to get control of important areas or dictated policies in the all-important oil districts. What officer could be relied upon in an emergency of this character to the same extent as Maj. Gen. Wood?"

Truly, all the experts in camouflage were not in France; or in Hoboken, decorating transports. The statement was obviously inspired, since the Washington correspondents were too hardened to the ways of the Capital to broadcast such a story except on high authority. For instance mendacity it touched a new high mark.

It accomplished its purpose, not because the public took it seriously but rather because in the face of such elaborate "horn-swoggle," debate seemed, and was, futile. Only a handful of editors, finding the explanations of the act even more irritating than the act itself, retorted sharply that the excuses were "wholly unsatisfactory." If the Secretary of War was afraid to state clearly the causes which inspired the "shabby treatment" of Wood, then the matter was important enough to call for a statement from the President himself.

Tragedy Was Wilson's.

"It is nasty episodes like this," says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, "which, if not promptly and candidly cleared up, lead to suspicion and distrust, and often do more to undermine confidence in the wisdom of Democratic leadership than graver mistakes made in good faith."

The administration would have done well to have pondered that warning. It held an ominous note. The President and his advisers might play fast and loose with Russia, tread on Haiti, throw China to the wolves. Those actions were too large and too involved to dramatize themselves in terms which the common man could grasp. But the picture of the administration striking down at the gang-plank a patriotic American—whose only fault was that he had been right while the administration had been wrong—and then lying about it, continuously, elaborately, with cynical contempt for the intelligence of the public, was something which the dullest mind could comprehend, and remember. How far the responsibility was Wilson's, only his Maker knew. But no faithful henchman could save him from the effects. Once more the tragedy of the episode was not primarily Wood's, but Wilson's.

Wood, meanwhile, was showing the public an imperturbability which gave no hint of the fires of disappointment, resentment and bitterness that seethed underneath. He was as a rule so calm, apparently so stolid, that few knew how his emotions could tear him. His friends marveled at his self-control. All the public heard from him was the statement: "I am a soldier and stand ready to obey any orders that are given me;" and said, "This man is a good loser." Men who had taken the administration's view of him, who had thought him insubordinate, refractory, playing politics, chasing the limelight, men who were bored with the "Wood case," bored with the chorus of his friends touting his virtues, agreed that whatever his faults, here was a man.

On the first of June he went to Camp Mills to bid farewell to his division. He found the men disheartened, the officers indignant. For the last time he watched his division march past. "There are none better," he said, "in any army in the world."

He gathered the officers round him. It was a hard thing to say good-by to these men, and through them to the thousands who constituted the rank and file. It was inevitable that they should all have been conscious that something magnificent and precious, a force their country needed, was being dissipated inexorably and forever before their eyes. The organization which together they had created remained, a powerful instrument, which Wood's successors would handle with vision and skill. But the element which Wood had created through the action of his own controlled, effective ardor upon the minds of officers and men, could not be transmitted to another, depending as it did upon the continuous flow, back and forth, of the thing that men called magnetism. The memory of it would linger as a kind of nostalgia in the hearts of these men, but the thing itself was dead as a dynamo cut off from the source of its power.

His Farewell to Division.

Never did this man of a thousand daring indiscretions show better the self-control which he could exercise in a crisis.

"I will not say good-by, but consider it a temporary separation. At least," he added, "I hope so.

"I have worked with you and you have done excellent work. I had hoped very much to take you over to the other side. In fact, I had no intimation, direct or indirect, of any change of orders until we reached here the other night. The orders have been changed and I am to go back to Funston. I leave for there tomorrow morning.

"I wish you the best of luck and ask you to keep up the high standard of conduct and work you have established in the past. There isn't anything to be said. These orders stand and the only thing to do is to do the best we can—all of us—to win the war.

"That's what we are here for; that's what you have been trained for. I shall follow your career with the deepest interest—with just as much interest as though I were with you. Good luck and God bless you."

No hint of resentment or self-pity; but, where a lesser man might have weakened the discipline of his men, giving an example of loyal fortitude which burned into men's minds, in one heart-breaking symbol, the meaning of soldierly obedience.

So he spoke his farewells. Tears were in the eyes of the officers, and more than one, as he shook Wood's hand, was unable to speak. "The men," said an eyewitness, "were the saddest looking lot I ever saw. I pray never to behold such a sight again."

His division. None better in any army in the world.

"We can say the same of their leader," said the New York Tribune. "None better in any army in the world.

"The one colossal loser from the episode is not the Eighty-ninth Division nor Gen. Wood, but the United States of America. * * * Where in the history of the world was there ever so urgent a call for a great-hearted leader and inspirer of men?"

Presidency Issue Rises.

Wood found that in the Middle West the indignation against his separation from the division was, if anything, more intense than in Washington or in New York. The people of the States from which the division had been recruited had a personal stake in his fate. Wood's solicitude for his men, his sense of justice, his human understanding of their needs and aspirations had stirred a loyalty in the men which had spread to their families and throughout the States from which they came. They had themselves thus come to know him, to admire him, to feel, indeed, a certain glow for him; and to those who had a son, a brother or a lover in the division it had been a source of pride and comfort that he was to go into battle under Wood's leadership.

The excuses and explanations which emanated from the War Department fell coldly upon the ears of these Westerners. They saw the large outlines of the picture, and that, they said, was all they needed: Wood had labored for preparedness while the administration was still thinking that words would dispel the enemy at the gate. Events had proved Wood right and the administration wrong. Now Wood was being punished. They thought it was a "rotten deal." Here and there, in the area from which the Eighty-Ninth had come, the suggestion was heard that Wood might make an admirable candidate for President in 1920.

That idea, indeed, already was receiving consideration among political leaders in the Middle West. While Wood was on his way to New York, before any suspicion had arisen that he was not to be permitted to take his division to France, William Allen White, who published at Emporia, Kans., a daily newspaper which carried weight throughout the country entirely out of proportion with its circulation, wrote Wood of a growing conviction in his own mind that Wood was possibly the only candidate whom the Republicans might nominate with any chance of success.

"So you look like a white hope to me," he wrote Wood. "And, barring the chance of Col. Roosevelt desiring the Presidency, I want to help you. The time will come when hundreds of strong men all over the country in the Republican party will realize that you are the best chance for redeeming the country from incompetency. And I want to be reckoned among those who will espouse your cause."

Salina, Kans., organized a Wood-for-President Club.

Clearly, if the successive demotions and humiliations which the administration had inflicted upon Wood had been intended to stifle his political chances, the effort had been something worse than a failure. Moralists might indeed have quoted the Book of Job and pointed out how the fears of the administration had largely created the menace which they had dreaded.

HOW IT BEGAN

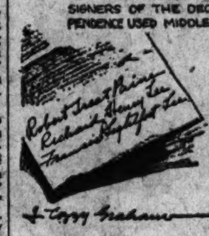
By Russ Murphy and Roy Sercombe

LICK INTO SHAPE

IT IS AN AGE OLD SUPERSTITION THAT BABY BEARS ARE BORN SHAPELESS AND THAT THEIR MOTHER LICKS THEM UNTIL THEY ASSUME SHAPE. THIS IDEA HAS GIVEN US THE EXPRESSION, "TO LICK INTO SHAPE."

MIDDLE NAMES.

MIDDLE NAMES WERE UNKNOWN A FEW CENTURIES AGO BECAUSE PEOPLE THOUGHT IF THEY SHOWED TOO MUCH AFFECTION TOWARD CHILDREN, THE IMMORTALS WOULD BE OFFENDED AND HARM THE CHILD. IN FACT, MIDDLE NAMES WERE PROHIBITED BY LAW UNTIL ABOUT 1700, AFTER THEY WERE PERMITTED IT TOOK A LONG TIME FOR THEM TO BE POPULAR. ONLY THREE SIGNERS OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE USED MIDDLE NAMES.



HOOP SKIRTS

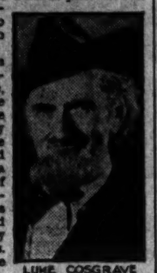
Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood.—One of Hollywood's quaintest characters is Tiny Jones, a diminutive Welsh woman past middle age, whose history previous to 1924 remains to be told.



LUKE COSGRAVE

Miss Jones may have another first name, but neither she nor any one else ever uses any but Tiny. She is sprightly and talkative, with a rare sense of humor. Her accent indicates she has not lived in this country very many years.

The first time she ever was before a movie camera, so far as is known, was in "Greed," a picture Eric von Stroheim directed. He was in San Francisco on business when he saw Tiny gingerly crossing a busy intersection.

"Here," the whimsical "Von" must have said as he approached her, "is a person of value to pictures." She appeared to him, as she does to others, like a Dickens-drawn character come to life. Tiny is but 4 feet 8 inches tall.

Since then Tiny has been in many pictures, in small parts, often as only an extra. She has become a close friend of John Barrymore and his wife, Dolores Costello.

Film Friends.

There are many friendships like the Jones-Barrymore relationship in Hollywood.

A close friend of Betty Compson's is Gertrude Robinson, once famous when she played opposite Marshall Neilan back in 1915. Miss Robinson "stands in" for Betty while cameras are focused, and frequently plays extra roles in her pictures.

James Cruze, Miss Compson's former husband, has never forgotten the man who gave him his start on the stage. Even when Cruze hasn't a part for Luke Cosgrave, he pays him. Their friendship began 26 years ago in a small town in Utah.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 9, 1906.

The Rev. John Eaton, familiarly known as Gen. Eaton, died at his home in the Concord apartment after an illness of two days. He was the organizer of the American school system in Porto Rico.

The House made a new speed record in the passage of private pension bills today by putting through 429 measures in 72 minutes.

While snow and slush fill the streets and sidewalks, and hundreds of idle workmen are waiting for a chance to use the shovels, Washington is without money to clean her streets, and the duty is left to the sun, who has attacked the job "with a warm smile."

Paul Laurence Dunbar, the poet of the Negro race, died at his home in Dayton, Ohio, today, after a year's illness.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

IMPORTED DISEASES.

THERE are many who hold that malaria, yellow fever and typhoid fever were brought to America from Africa by slaves. This theory, if it can be so dignified, is based on the history of disease among Indians prior to the coming of the white man; the history of disease among whites and Indians before and after the importation of slaves; the prevalence, or lack of prevalence, of certain diseases among Negroes in Africa and the United States; and the immunity and susceptibility of Negroes to certain diseases in comparison with whites.

The annual reports of the health departments of Tanganyika and other parts of Africa, and the studies of disease prevalent on the gold coast of Africa supply some support of this theory, as was set forth in a recent article. The Tanganyika report supplies some information on other phases of it.

If the white people of America react to yellow fever, typhoid, and malaria in a way that indicates that these are comparatively new racial enemies the Negroes in Tanganyika react to tuberculosis and pneumonia in a way that suggests that these diseases are new to them.

This is particularly true with consumption. This disease, with them, is almost like a somewhat drawn out pneumonia instead of a disease of years' duration, as with us. The same is true, though in lesser measure, of consumption among American Negroes. It seems that the white man is slowly acquiring immunity to consumption, the American Negro is following in his footsteps, but a few decades behind, and the African Negro is meeting a new enemy. The pneumonia picture is of the same general type, but it is not so true to form.

The Negro in America is comparatively immune to hookworm and other forms of intestinal parasites. This is not a characteristic of Negroes in Africa. These people, both in the bush and in the towns, are infected with more parasites than we of this country, white or black, know anything of. They have all of ours and others besides.

There has been controversy as to the country of origin of syphillis. The Negro in America reacts to syphilis after a fashion differing from that of the white man. The African Negro reacts much as does the black American. There is a closely related disease called yaws, that both white and blacks in North America escape. It is one of the most prevalent disorders among Indians, Negroes and racial mixed bloods in those sections of Central and South America from which the Spaniards have been charged with carrying syphilis to Europe in the early part of the sixteenth century.

The outstanding menace just now to the bush Negroes of Tanganyika is African sleeping sickness. It seems to be coming to certain tribes for the first time within tribal tradition.

YANKEES LIKELY TO MEET DEMANDS OF LOU GEHRIG

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The Schmeling-Stribinig prize fight is still looking around for a place to happen five months hence, and in the meanwhile the customers will have plenty of time to ask themselves if it really matters after all. This is one prize fight which would be more likely to meet with commercial success if it were produced in haste. The records of the two athletes are not very impressive, and the longer the customers wait the more likely they will be to realize that the result will not decide anything anyway.

The contest is to be advertised as a heavyweight championship bout, but already the supplementary billing admits that it will be merely an expensive preliminary to another heavyweight championship bout between the winner and Primo Carnera. And after that one has been decided, a further heavyweight championship prize fight will be necessary between that winner and Jack Sharkey in order to clear the title.

This seems to be an unduly expensive and roundabout process. If a customer goes to buy a title insurance policy on a house he expects to obtain a title insurance policy for his money. But under the procedure which is being arranged in the matter of the heavyweight title, the customer is asked to buy a policy which merely says that the title is clear except in two places. A more practical way would be to have the boys who hold claims against the property to get together and merge them in one of their number in private, preparatory to a final general clearing of the title in a public heavyweight championship bout.

TITLE CLEAR EXCEPT IN 2 PLACES

The South Park Board of Chicago has forbidden the bout in the public stadium at Soldier Field there on the ground that the public property of the Chicago citizens can not be used for the benefit of a New York charity which figures nominally in the promotion of the prize fight and to some extent in the proceeds. The fight is barred from New York on the ground of Schmeling's political offenses against the New York prize fight commissioners, and if the City of New York can not tolerate a prize fight produced for the assistance of its own citizens, including the stockholders of Madison Square Garden, it is rather awkward to explain to the authorities of other cities why they ought to welcome the opportunity.

Jersey City, which is actually an annex or gun-room of New York City, is said to be hospitable, but Jersey City's invitation runs something like the late Bert Williams' generous sentiment, "You could have it if I had it but I ain't got it." Jersey City would be glad to oblige if Jersey City had an arena, but Jersey City ain't got an arena.

Philadelphia and Detroit are under consideration, also, but these cities are likely to have their own problems of unemployment and want and to consider the precedent established by the South Park Board of Chicago.

Although the Garden firm intended to exercise its Illinois charter for this purpose, it was well understood, of course, that the Illinois branch of the Garden firm was a ghost corporation and that the fight was to be a New York enterprise. The other cities seem to feel the same way about this that some of the newspapers are beginning to feel toward some of the celebrated football teams in the fall. The Notre Dame Football Team, for instance, is coming to be identified with a particular newspaper interest, and newspapers which do not sympathize with this interest have a suspicion that when they become enthusiastic over Notre Dame they are promoting the business of a business rival. This problem has not been solved as yet, but in time the rich and powerful newspapers may find themselves compelled to ignore Notre Dame or to establish similar connections of their own with Alabama, Washington State and so forth in order to compel their rivals to promote their interests in a similar way.

ENTERPRISE NEW YORK ONE

I am afraid that the leading heavyweight prize fighters really comprise one big happy, prosperous group and look for the establishment of the cauliflower lodge of the Rotary Club at no distant date. They write insulting letters to one another for publication in the papers and indulge in belittling comments in the presence of the reporters, but in unguarded moments they betray only the gentlest feelings for one another and the warmest sympathy for each other's ambitions.

Paulino Uzcudun fights Primo Carnera in Spain and the two boys meet and clink glasses together and toast the same ladies at a restaurant in New York.

"That was a pip that you hit me in the fourth," Paulino remarks jovially, and Primo, not to be outdone, replies, "You are telling me."

G.U. and C.U. In Contests Tonight

Hilltop Quintet Meets W. Virginia; Rider Plays Cards.

Burgess Holds Lead Over Scorers in Capital Group.

TWO games with strong invading teams open the week for local collegiate basket ball clubs tonight. Rider College, one of the highest ranking fives in the East, will engage Catholic on the Brookland court, while West Virginia U., which is maintaining the record of its predecessors for fine play, opposes Georgetown at Tech High School. Both will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

Both Catholic and Georgetown can regain some lost prestige by scoring over their respective foes, and doubtless they will put forth the best basket ball in their systems. Catholic already has met the powerful Rider quintet, having dropped a 44-to-25 decision to the Trentonites at the beginning of the season.

Tomorrow night George Washington, with the high-scoring Forrest Burgess, will see what it can accomplish against Rider in the G. W. gymnasium. The Colonial team, in spite of a 31-24 loss to Catholic last month, is rated stronger than the Brookland outfit.

Burgess Boosts His Total.

Burgess in one game last week scored 20 points to boost his total for the season to 145. This enabled him to hold first place away from the threat of Del Cosgrove, of Gallaudet, who has led the District college scoring race for two years. Cosgrove, in two games, collected 26 points to send his total up to 134.

Important changes in the race last week saw Bozey Berger, Maryland's star, advance from fifth to third place by scoring 31 points in three games. His total is now 115, two more than that of Johnny Ringle, of Gallaudet. Capt. Walter Morris, of Georgetown, edged into the big five by running his figure from 71 to 97 in three games, to oust Jack Conner, of G. W., who failed to add to his mark of 90.

Berger faces a good chance to crawl up on Burgess and Cosgrove this week, as his team is due to play four games while G. W. and Gallaudet are scheduled for only one apiece. Tommorow night Maryland meets North Carolina U., following which Washington College, Virginia and Western Maryland will invade the Maryland court.

American University's squad, none of whom is among the scoring leaders, will take to the road for three games, starting Thursday night, when they tackle Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh. On Friday and Saturday, respectively, they will oppose Davis-Elkins at Elkins, W. Va., and Salem at Salem, W. Va.

Rosedale Soccerists Defeat Patterson, 3-1

Ringing up all their goals in the second half, after their guests had assumed o 1-to-0 lead just before the intermission, the Rosedale booters, champions of The Post's 1931 Capital City Soccer League, downed the Patterson Team, of Baltimore, yesterday afternoon on the Silver Spring Field by a 3-to-1 score. Rain which fell intermittently during the game handicapped the play of both teams.

E. Burdette's pretty kick from just outside the net deadlocked the count in the first five minutes of the second half. Rosedale then forged into a never-to-be-headed lead a short time later when Henry Irving made good on a kick. Irving clinched the victory for his team by sending a long shot through the net in the closing stages of the battle.

The all-around play of Irving and the Burdette brothers featured for Rosedale, while Grothmal and and Phillips were the Patterson luminaries.

The same teams will clash again, probably in Baltimore, on a date to be selected within the next few days.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Jock Collins, Dayton, Ohio, won the professional match play golf tournament at the Miami Country Club by defeating John Kinder, Caldwell, N. J., 2 and 1, in the 18-hole finals today.

Club Teams in Armor To Hold Omelet Duel

Turlock, Calif., Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Rotary and Exchange clubmen Friday will egg each other on with a view to reducing the present large surplus of prospective omelettes in this vicinity and stabilizing the poultry industry.

Clad in armor and carrying baskets of eggs, the club members will hurl the missiles at each other until about 100 cases of eggs are only a fragrant memory.

The winning club will challenge service club teams of Modesto, Merced and other towns. The events will be sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

SKINKER FIVE COASTS TO VICTORY

House of David Club Beaten, 47-34, as Sweeney Stars.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

FAILING to be awed, as were most of the 500 spectators, by the artistic crops of whiskers decorating the countenances of their barber-dodging guests, the Skinker Eagles plastered a 47-to-34 defeat on the House of David five, from Benton Harbor, Mich., yesterday afternoon at the Silver Spring Armory.

Four of the Davidites sported beards which would have done the Smith Brothers proud, while the fifth, evidently a recent convert, was possessed of a nice growth of fuzz which bore potentialities of some day developing into a verdant whisker bush like those of his contemporaries. The four "vets" caused the Skinkers no end of trouble all afternoon, because they all looked alike and furthermore had no distinguishing numbers on their jerseys.

Skinkers Guard Effectively.

Despite these annoyances, the Skinkers managed to put up a pretty effective guarding game, which kept their guests shooting mostly from beyond the foul strip. And, incidentally, the Davidites were rather adept at pocketing these long-distance potshots.

Meanwhile, the Eagles themselves were experiencing little difficulty in penetrating the ragged defense of the Davidites, registering at least a dozen snowbirds during the contest.

Except for a short while in the opening minutes of the game, when the visitors rang up a short-lived, one-point lead, the Eagles were complete masters of the proceedings. Due largely to the sharpshooting of Joe Sweeney and Jake Goldblatt, they were on the long end of a 23-to-16 count at the intermission.

Easily the outstanding player of the contest was Joe Sweeney, Eagle forward, who dropped in nine field goals and three fouls to lead both teams in scoring. Bennie and Goldblatt, of the Skinkers, turned in commendable games. Lewis and Applegate carried the brunt of the burden for the visiting quintet.

Stewarts End Streak Of Printers.

Stewart Brothers Photographers snapped the Union Printers' twelve-game winning streak in a preliminary attraction, walloping their opponents by a 29-to-16 score. Hessler and Keppel led the Stewarts to their well-deserved triumph, the former annexing high scoring honors with four double-deckers and three fouls, and the latter displaying a clever brand of defensive work.

School Fives In Play-Off If Tied

Eastern Defeat, Tech Triumph Would Set Stage.

Gonzaga Plays Tonight; Busy Week for Scholastics.

PROVIDING tomorrow's results bring a tie for the high school basket ball championship, a play-off will be staged Friday at Tech, it was learned last night. A deadlock will result if Central triumphs over Eastern and Tech beats Business in tomorrow's final games of the series schedule. In such an event, Eastern and Tech would each finish with six victories against two defeats.

The crux of the situation appears to lie in the hands of Central, since Tech is odds-on favorite to defeat Business. Central goes into the Eastern game with the undeniable advantage of having already defeated the Lincoln Parkers in an early season game, 39-31.

Little has been heard of the possibilities of a basket ball play-off, since the memorable play-off several years back at the Arcadia when the Central-Eastern play-off game ended by being declared "no contest." The friction which arose at that time promised to squelch all future play-offs, but since that time no series has ended in a tie. There is nothing in the rules to prevent a play-off this year.

27 Games Booked For Week.

Although dominated by the appearance of the high school basket ball teams in their annual series, the scholastic basket ball calendar in general reaches its top notch this week, as every schoolboy outfit in Washington and its environs sees court action of the sternest sort.

Twenty-seven games in all will take up the time of the scholastic fives this week.

Tonight is the barest date on the week, but one event being carded Gonzaga has bitten off a large consignment in Georgtown's Freshmen, but should make the Hilltoppers step to the limit.

Tuesday's play in the high school series promises to absorb all the interest available that day, but Wednesday has several features of note, particularly the game in which Tech will meet Maryland University's big and fast freahman basket ball team. Tech will be the last hope of the high schools to check the trek of the Old Line Yearlings, who have trounced Eastern, Business, Central and Western.

Meadowbrook Games Thursday.

The latter part of the week, unless a play-off for the series title is necessary, will see basket ball fading a bit in the minds of the scholastically inclined fans in favor of the participation of Eastern, Tech and Central in the scholastic division of the Meadowbrook games in Philadelphia Thursday afternoon.

On Saturday afternoon, Central's swimming team, which put up a good fight against the undefeated Yale yearling tankmen Saturday night, will engage Baltimore City College at Baltimore. On the same afternoon Eastern High's basket ball team will meet Episcopal over at Alexandria.

Carnera Slumbers as Train Visits Capital But Manager See Speaks for His Battler

Owner of European Rights to Giant Is Optimistic.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

PRIMO CARNERA, the moist-lipped Italian man, whose pituitary gland disorder caused him to sprout to a giant's proportions, passed through Washington yesterday in a state of profound insensibility. While his manager, the bristling little Leon See, saw that no one disturbed the great man, no definite sounds of life came from the drawing room of the Pullman car "Asquitata," except a gentle undulation felt over the entire car as the great conquerer of obscure heavyweights performed the operation of breathing.

The reason Signor Carnera was asleep, the bristling little Signor See explained, was because "Primo, she is steel the Catholic, and go to early mass in New York before we come here."

European Rights Belong to See.

Signor See, who is outright owner of the European rights of his elephantine battler, which, I understand, extend well up the right leg, across the lower chest and take in the general territory proximitous to the left biceps, dislodged several of the thirteen satellites which are hovering around Carners on his trip to Miami, settled back in the clear space and permitted his features to perform a nervous little smile. Then he began to chatter in the excitable manner which has been commented upon before by abler pens.

The New York Boxing Commission will lift its ban of eight months' standing on Carnera this week, is the earnest opinion of Signor See. Carnera himself is merely one of the reasons for lifting it. Perhaps the main reason is because of a recent dirty deal the New York clique received from the California Boxing Commission. There is a tacit agreement between the two whereby a fighter banned by one is instantly and automatically banned by the other. Thus when the California commission placquainted with the person who threw in a sponge for Chevalier in their boxing farce, New York, out of sympathy, did likewise. But of late New York's body has banned Paulino, and California has yet to carry on the ban. Max Baer, barred by California, remains free to roam the New York rings.

According to Signor See, but one thing remains to be done to effect the lifting of the Carnera ban: Carnera must challenge Sharkey and engage that gentleman for "charity." Signor See was noncommittal over which charity it should be. I suggested milk, Salvation Army and Mr. Farley's own charity, but Signor See waved all three aside as inconsequential. The challenge in the name of charity, like the play, is the thing.

Signor See had much more to say about the ill-starred Maloney fight, but his remarks concerning the next renewal of that light opera, scheduled for March 5 in Miami, are more pertinent. Primo will win in a waltz, of that there is little doubt in the whole Carnera clique. The Alp's improvement in the last three months has bordered on the miraculous. He toyed with Paulino in Spain, whereas a year ago it would have been a trying bout for him. The occasionally mentioned Florida sun is going to bring him down to a lithe 255 by March 1, which right now means a drop of 20 pounds.

The Atlantic Coast Line party includes two cartoonists, several rubbers who work in shifts on the great man's body; a battery of bloated sparring partners, several wives and one very lovely Italian child of about 8.

Fifth Zivic Brother Enters Boxing Game

Pittsburgh, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Introducing the five fighting Zivics of Pittsburgh, the last of the Zivic brothers, Eddie, 20, has entered the ring. First there was Pete, now 29; then Jack, now 27; Joe, now 23, and Fritzie, 17.

Joe was so proficient at baseball that he abandoned his boxing career to follow the national pastime.

Jack, who campaigned as a welterweight, was the best known of the quintet. His greatest claim to fame was his knockout a couple of years back of Lew Tendler, Philadelphia southpaw. He was the only boxer who ever did the trick.

Consumers Nose Out Company F Passers

Griffith Consumers yesterday nosed out the Company F Guard five in a Prince George County Legion game played at the Hyattsville Armory, 20 to 19. The Consumers led, 11 to 7, at the half, and held a small margin all the way, just managing to withstand a Guard rally. A technical foul, charged to the Guards for stalling late in the game, proved costly, as Lyles turned this free toss into a point—his team's victory margin.

In a preliminary, Company F Reserves easily disposed of the Wilson Baptists, of Colmar Manor, 40 to 8.

Rockville Five Bows To Howitzer Co., 31-28

Undisputed first place in the Montgomery County Basket Ball League fell to the Howitzer Company, National Guard five yesterday afternoon at the Kensington Armory, when it downed Rockville before a gymfull of rabid fans.

The final score, 31 to 28, hardly tells the story of the valliant fight the Howitzers had to put up to gain the verdict. The soldiers trailed from the start of the game up until within a minute and a half of the end. The score at the half stood 19 to 10 in favor of Rockville.

In the waning minutes of the game, after a dogged second half drive, Pepco Barry and Wilson Birthwright slipped through the Rockville defense for brilliant bits of basketing that sent their team ahead in sensational fashion.

It was the first defeat suffered this year by the Rockville team.

Slugger Vital To Chances Of Club

Talk of Morgan or Ruth at First Is Discounted.

Five Other Yankees Are Unsigned as Training Nears.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WITH Babe Ruth on the high seas, en route to Florida by boat, where he will golf and play until the Yankees report for training at the St. Petersburg camp, one Henri Louis Gehrig is getting most of the baseball publicity in and around New York, the cause being his failure to sign the contract offered for the coming season.

Gehrig, a great hitter, but only a fair first baseman, ended his contract last season, it having been a two-year one calling for $25,000 per annum. Just what terms the big doorway guardian has laid down to Owner Jake Ruppert are not known, but it is understood that he wants a new two-year agreement calling for $35,000.

Barrow Spokesman For Club.

With Col. Ruppert ill abed, suffering from influenza, Ed Barrow, deposed business manager, but still the owner's right-hand man, yesterday did the talking for the New York Club in an interview in the "Big Town." According to him, Gehrig will have to do any "giving in" to be done—or else. And the "or else" was that the New York Club could get Ed Morgan from the Indians any time it wants him—which may or may not be true—and, besides, the Yankees are thinking about bringing in Ruth from the outfield to save his creaking legs, and that the Babe can play a mean first base.

Barrows admitted that six of his athletes are still out of the fold, but did not give their names or express any particular worry about any but Gehrig.

"No, we're not going to see Gehrig," he declared rather brusquely. "He'll have to see us. You know he's not the only first baseman in the country. Eddie Morgan, of the Indians, is one. We could have him for the asking. And Babe Ruth is another. We've been thinking a long time about saving the Babe's legs by placing him at first base. So if Gehrig does not see fit to sign, we may manage to get along without him."

Gehrig Needed by Yanks.

While no hired employe is indispensable, the Yankees need Gehrig like flowers need rain and sunshine and there would be very little of the latter in the life of the new New York manager, Marse Joe McCarthy, if he had to start the 1931 season without the big "buster." Gehrig may not get exactly what he asks for in his salary argument with Messrs. Ruppert and Barrows, but you can bet all of the tea in China with perfect safety that, no matter who comes to who, the first baseman will be satisfied and on the job on the date he already has been ordered to report at "St. Pete."

Here is a case where the Yankees need Gehrig, irrespective of their Morgan and Ruth hints, as much, if not more so, as Gehrig needs a job—and Col. Ruppert is one who never has been known to quibble over a few

R. F. & P. TOSSERS ANNEX ALEXANDRIA FEATURE

Woodlawns Are Beaten, 39 to 32

Boys Club Yorkes Bow to Fraters by 32 to 16.

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 8.—Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Co. cagers defeated the crack Woodlawn A. C., of Fort Myer, Va., by 39 to 32, here this afternoon in a heated struggle which featured the five-game cage program presented by the railroaders at Schuler's Hall.

The railroaders offered a ragged defense at the outset and Woodlawn went into a commanding lead, but the locals rallied midway of the second quarter, showered their opponents' basket with a deluge of beautiful shots and were in the van, 25 to 22, at half time.

Once ahead, R. F. & P. never relinquished the lead, but it was extended throughout the remainder of the fray to keep its narrow margin. Eliett Cabell and Lester McMenamin, who scored 10 and 9, respectively, were best for the winners, while Faro and Fitzpatrick stood out for the Woodlawn team.

Alpha Delta Omega Fraternity put on a scoring spree in the fourth quarter of its game with the Boys Club Yorkes, of Washington, and won, 32 to 16, after being deadlocked with the aliens at 14-all as the final quarter got under way.

"Doc" Dreifus, "Bottles" West and Eddie Gorman were the winners' best offensive threats. The scoring of the Yorke combination was fairly well divided.

In the other games staged on the program, the Clover A. C. won an Alexandria Junior League game from the Friends, 22 to 3; Flashes trimmed the All-Stars, 20 to 7, in a girls' game played under boys' rules, and Virginia A. C. won handily over the Columbia Engine Company Firemen, 42 to 20.

Miss Ada Hicks dominated the girls' game with six field goals from difficult angles, while Lester Scott led his Clovers to triumph with 12 points. Friends, incidentally, failed to score from the field.

SAYS PEGLER

mannered, assures Paulino that he would be most unhappy to think he had really hurt him, and adds that, anyway, Paulino banged him a pretty good one in the fifth.

Jack Sharkey fights Dempsey and goes down and out claiming a foul, but when they meet again in Miami Sharkey remarks earnestly, "Jack, why don't you and I have another fight? We could make a lot of money."

BROTHERLY LOVE IS IN EVIDENCE

"Not me, pardner," Mr. Dempsey says; "you hit too hard."

"Don't kid me, big boy," Mr. Sharkey parries; "you like to of killed me with that left."

A few years later, as a favor to Sharkey, who is in momentary eclipse, Dempsey low-rates him in a ranking of the heavyweights, giving Sharkey an opportunity to denounce him in print, but a few days after that Dempsey goes to a hospital and Sharkey calls to sit on his bed and sympathize.

Carnera calls Schmeling his social friend but his business rival, and tells of the delightful afternoon he spent at Sharkey's home near Boston, with special emphasis on the ideal nature of Sharkey's home life with his family.

"And that house," Primo exclaims. "That house Sharkey lives in is one of the most beautiful I have ever seen. It is furnished with early American antiques. His wife and children are charming, and he is a remarkably fine type of man."

Dempsey visits the Striblings at their home in Georgia and rides the air with Willie, the pilot, in the Stribling ship, leaving souvenir gold watches for one and all as he departs, and Jimmy Maloney, the Boston fish-wrangler with the soft, sweet voice, never is sore at anybody.

Business is business, but Macy can dine with Gimbel nevertheless.

USUALLY a May fly lives but for a day. However, an earlier stage of the insect, a wiggling grub, exists for from one to three years in water. Far different from the May fly that it is to be, the grub is a greedy creature with a huge appetite. The May fly itself comes into the world without any sign of a mouth. In fact, its brief life is too limited to be spent searching for food, for the sole purpose of the May fly, it seems, is to lay eggs. From these eggs new grubs hatch and in turn produce other May flies.

The immense 36-pound cabbage was grown by a young lady farmer of Egham, England. For years the farmers in and near Egham have competed for the honor of growing the largest cabbage, and an annual agricultural show is held each year in order that prize specimens might be selected and awards presented. At the last show a cabbage was selected as the largest and the prize was about to be awarded when a young lady farmer, who had come from London just a few months before and knew nothing about farming, drove up in a truck and unloaded a cabbage more than twice the size of any that Egham farmers had ever seen.

By J. B. SNODGRASS

WITH ideal weather prevailing and the track in fast condition, an interesting card of seven races has been arranged for Monday patrons at the popular Hialeah Park course. In the Suwanee River Handicap, a test for 3-year-olds and upward, over the mile and an eighth route, a field of five distance equines will face the barrier in the feature attraction, fifth on the program.

The Aquamarine Purse, an allowance affair for the older horses in training, has received an overnight list of six fleet performers, which will be dispatched over the three-quarter-mile sprint ground, of the sixth number.

In the principal event, the Bartelstein entry of SIDNEY GRANT and HILLSBOROUGH appears a standout in the small field. The former has shown a return to his best form and, lightly weighted with 110 pounds, should annex the major portion of the $1,200 purse. REPLEVIN, a consistent racer in the M. Lowenstein Stable, disappointed in his last start over a heavy track, but turned in two impressive victories prior to his defeat and under favorable conditions should furnish the opposition.

PATRONESS, a clever filly in the Rancocas Stable, may falter at the long route, but should account for the minor award. POLENTIN raced well at Bowie in the fall, but may need this race as a conditioner.

In the supporting event, PROTRACTOR, from the L. Perry Stable, winner of his two outings at this track, turned in a remarkable effort in his last race to equal the track record of 1:10 2-5 for the 6-furlong dash. CROSSBONES was easily beaten by the top selection in their last meeting and figures to finish in the runner-up position. MURKY CLOUD, from the C. V. Whitney establishment, has raced well at this oval and is favored for the show.

FIRST RACE—Twelve 3-year-old platers will parade to the post in the 6-furlong dash of the opening number. LITTLE TOOTS has shown the most consistent form of this contingent.

SECOND RACE — The customary limit of fifteen juveniles has been entered in the 2½ furlongs of the second. IMPEACH has shown speed in recent performances and favored by the conditions is the selection for the major award.

THIRD RACE—TYPHOON, a highly-regarded 6-year-old in the Barned Brothers stables, raced forwardly in his first start this year and with that race as a conditioner, holds the edge over this field of platers.

FOURTH RACE—In the fourth, a gallop of a mile and a quarter, eight routers have been named to contest the issue with claiming conditions. LIGHT VIEW turned in an impressive victory on Friday and on recent form figures to experience little difficulty from this group.

SEVENTH RACE—Another mile and a quarter race will be decided in the final contest when nine 4-year-olds and upward face the starter. WISECRACK has shown steady improvement and rates the call against this class.

"You are Fighting the Battle of the Health Commissioners"

FAIR HAVEN, VT.

Fair Haven, Vermont
June 24, 1930.

American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

More and better health to you in your fight against the spitting evil. Your advertisements attacking spit-tipped cigars have my commendation.

You are fighting the battle of the health commissioners in striving for better sales of your non-spit-tipped cigars. I am not interested in your specific product. I am interested in public health. That is why I am writing you.

You can publish this letter if you care to.

Very sincerely,
Rushmore Lape
Health Officer, Fair Haven, Vermont

RL/JD

...one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Lape's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Lape writes: "Your advertisements attacking spit-tipped cigars have my commendation."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it...Smoke Certified Cremo—a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

Youth Has Not Rejected God, "Liberal" Declares

—Youth generally has not rejected God and the church, but rather, has ignored both, the Secular League was told at its weekly meeting yesterday afternoon at 1006 E street northwest by Albert Dehner Bell, of Chester, Pa., identifying himself as a former president of the Junior Atheist League of America, but now a "liberal" in religion.

"Youth's ignoring of God and the church is doing more to cause the downfall of the church than active opposition," he said. "The church is making desperate efforts to save itself, but it can not bring itself abreast of the times. Youth, as always, is abreast of the times."

IDENTITY CLAIMED AS MAN IS VIEWED BY ROBBED COUPLE

Holdup Suspect Denies Any Connection With Recent Bandit Raids.

RADIO CRUISER CAR IN MINUTE ARREST

Emil Bryan Cundiff Is Held by Police After Gun Is Found on Person.

Emil Bryan Cundiff, 25, of L street northwest near Fifteenth street, was yesterday identified at police headquarters by two victims of holdups he is alleged to have committed early yesterday morning.

Cundiff was arrested by Detective Sergt. R. J. Cox, of the radio cruiser car, at Connecticut avenue and L street northwest, one minute after he had received a flash broadcast of the man's description. Cox said the man drew a pistol which he wrested from him before he had an opportunity to fire.

Connection Is Denied.

Though identified positively, police say Cundiff denies any connection with the robberies. He is being held at the Third Precinct on a charge of investigation.

Charles L. Richardson, of Biltomre street northwest near Nineteenth street northwest, said that Cundiff was the an who robbed him at pistol point as he was sitting in his car in front of his home with Clifford Sanford, of the same address.

Another Claims Identity.

Milton Straus, of F street northwest, near Nineteenth street, identified him as the robber who took $5 from him and two other men after he had forced them to drive him in their car to M street northwest, near Sixteenth street, from the Army and Navy Club.

Police say that Marjorie Boatright, clerk of the Palace Laundry branch on Twenty-first street northwest, near C street; Thomas E. Miller, of Wisconsin avenue northwest, near McComb street, and clerks from a Sanitary grocery store on Thirteenth street northwest, near D street, all victims of holdups Saturday night, will attempt to identify Cundiff today.

WOMEN MAY SOLVE PROBLEM IN RUSSIA

the network of dining rooms and the building of laundries and other enterprises to free women from domestic work."

The government report considers the fact that 71,000 children were cared for in 1930, whereas last year 170,000 babies were looked after, and their budget was extended from 27,000,000 roubles (about $13,500,000) to 80,000,000 roubles (about $41,500,000).

In case accommodations are too small, only the children of women office-workers would be cared for.

Another measure would permit 370,000 young girls to be trained in factory apprentice schools. At present there are 300,000 working women who are members of trade unions. According to the government statement, "conditions make them economically equal to men."

Berlin, Feb. 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—An alleged "gigantic order" given by the Soviet government to German industrial concerns in the first two weeks of the current year is reported today in Rote Fahne, Communist organ published in Berlin. According to this newspaper the Russian trade commissioners in Berlin report the placing of the following order:

Steam turbines to the value of 1,125,000 marks (267,975) for a long distance heating plant at Maschinostroy, in the Urals, ordered from a Silesian firm; machinery for the same place from a West German concern for 1,500,000 marks ($357,300); 1,500,000 marks worth of dredges, ordered from a North German firm.

In addition, according to Rote Fahne, orders were placed with various German firms for metal products amounting to 3,000,000 marks ($714,600), sheet iron for 2,000,000 marks ($476,400) and chemicals for 750,000 marks ($178,650).

Vossische Zeitung reports that the Soviet trade commissions placed in Germany in 1930 orders aggregating 566,000,000 marks ($134,821,200), an increase of 28 per cent over the total orders of the preceding year.

COMMUNIST GROUP TO INVADE CAPITAL

150 Men and Women Due for Demonstration Today on Unemployment.

TO DEMAND INSURANCE

Another bunch of Communists is scheduled to descend upon the Capital today, this time to present demands before Congress for passage of the "workers' unemployment insurance bill," tomorrow. Part of the delegation of about 150 whites and Negroes, men and women, are said to be beating their way to Washington by the "side door Pullman" route while others will be deposited here by buses and trucks.

The gathering here, the Communist committee states, will be a signal for demonstrations throughout the country entered into by hundreds of thousands of workers in support of the bill. These demonstrations, planned as marches upon city halls in metropolitan centers, are set for tomorrow, when the Communists hope to gain the attention of the House.

As for the program in Washington, the delegates expect to meet here today to draft a statement for both houses of Congress. This statement will be sent to all members of both houses, and a letter has been sent requesting that action on the bill be started today, making it possible for the delegation to secure the floor in the House and Senate to read its resolution and present its demands for unemployment insurance.

"The delegation demands the floor because it holds the workers, employed or unemployed, have no representatives in Congress and because Congress has taken no steps to legislate insurance for unemployed workers," its representatives state.

A march to the Capitol is also on the program for tomorrow when the Communists will attempt to gain the floor in both houses of Congress.

The delegation from the Denver district left the Colorado city last Wednesday, beating its way by freight train, according to sponsors of the movement.

Mr. and Mrs. Keroes Married for 50 Years

A host of friends and relatives called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Keroes, 3517 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday to wish them joy and happiness in the celebration of their golden wedding. Telegrams from out-of-town friends and bouquets poured in all the day. Mr. Keroes is 71, and his wife 70. They have lived in Washington more than 35 years.

About 40 were guests at dinner in honor of the couple and about 75 called during the afternoon. The seven children of the couple were present, with twelve grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. The children are Miss Frances Keroes, Dr. William Keroes, Myer Keroes, Mrs. Sarah Mendelsohn, Mrs. Rebecca Cohn, Mrs. Lena Fredenberg and A. G. Keroes, of Philadelphia.

Man Discovered Dead; Gas Pours From Heater

Found on the bed of his room, L street northwest, near Eleventh street, by Mrs. Mary Gardner, Tolie Norris, roomer, 45 years old, was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital physician after members of the fire rescue squad had attempted vainly to revive him.

Police investigators said gas was pouring from an open jet of a heater when he was found. Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt withheld the death certificate pending further investigation of the circumstances.

Contractors Ask President's Aid

Association Would Alter Bill Covering Prevailing Wage Rate.

The Associated General Contractors of America urgently requested President Hoover yesterday to intercede with House and Senate leaders to amend the Davis-Bacon bill to make the purposes of the legislation "workable, practical and equitable."

The association contended this emergency legislation, to guarantee that labor employed on the construction of Federal buildings shall receive the rate of wage prevailing where the building is being erected, would result inevitably in uncertainties, dispute and unnecessary waste of public money.

A letter sent to the President sets forth that the organization would have no objection to the measure if it were amended to allow the head of the department or establishment concerned to determine what the prevailing rates of wages are in a locality, and that such rate be stated in advertisements for proposals. The bill has passed the Senate.

Pedestrian Collapses Of Acute Indigestion

Charles E. Clark, 68 years old, was taken suddenly ill yesterday at Fifteenth and G streets northwest. He was walking with his son, William, when he collapsed.

He was placed in a taxicab and taken to Emergency Hospital. He was treated for acute indigestion and was removed to his home, 2914 Bladensburg road northeast.

Five Cars Slide Off Bridge After Parapet Is Smashed

Destruction of the parapet of the bridge on Ram's Horn road combined with the slippery condition of the road itself has caused five cars to slide off that spot in the last 24 hours.

So far as could be learned, no one has been injured in the series of accidents. The parapet of the bridge was broken away late Saturday night when it was struck by a car said to have been driven by a colored man. Whether or not he was injured could not be learned, as he was not at the scene when officers arrived.

The road at the bridge is sharply banked, so that turns may be made at high speed. Most drivers, however, have been driving slowly on account of the wet roads. The slippery surface allows the cars to slide off onto the shoulders at the side.

One car even landed in the waters of the Northwest Branch, due to the driver's inability to control his car on the wet road. Beyond a case of wet feet earned when the occupants waded shore, however, there were no casualties.

GOD WEIGHS TRAITS AND TEMPERAMENT, DR. YARNELL STATES

Natural Gifts Foundation for Each One's Sanctity, He Counsels.

LIFE NOT FASHIONED TO BE BEATEN DOWN

Those Who Fail to Heed Word Represented as Hardening Road.

Dr. Franic Yarnell, rector of Epiphany Chapel, preached yesterday morning on the Parable of the Sower.

The parable, found in the first three Gospels, shows, said the preacher, that it made a vivid impression on the writers.

Dr. Yarnell took his text from St. Luke: "And when much people were gathered together, and were come to Him out of every city, He spake by a parable: A sower went forth to sow his seed."

Part of the sermon follows:

"The time and setting of that picture have changed, but the human nature in the foreground remains much the same as when Our Lord addressed it and used it for the purpose of His illustration, by the Sea of Galilee.

"The great mass of His hearers must have been aware of the general features of the new Gospel which Jesus preached. The new dispensation had been proclaimed in the simple, straightforward, unadorned truths of the Sermon on the Mount. The time had now come when certain receptive conditions were necessary in the hearers if they would indeed gain greater light and deeper spiritual insight.

"'Take heed how ye hear,' was the great lesson He would now impress. The beautiful imagery of this pastoral parable was familiar to all of them. It called up scenes in their every day lives with which they had intimate contact, and their lesson could not be lost.

"The first lesson we learn from this parable is our responsibility for the results of the sown word. Our Lord did not leave us in doubt as to that. He made his own interpretation of the parable, so that no one can fail to see where it applied and to whom.

"The wayside where the first seed fell was the most exposed portion of the field. It represents to us that side of life which is most constantly and easily exposed to the influences of the world. Your lives are like that, some of you. But you err when you say that you can not escape the influence of the world. The soil of your hearts is just what you make it.

"God Almighty did not fashion your life to be beaten down by the tread and traffic of the world. He made it rich and productive, but you are allowing it to be trodden down. 'Every time you hear the word of God and do not, there is a hardening of the footpath.'

"'And some fell upon a rock, and as soon as it sprung up it withered because it lacked moisture.' 'Stony ground,' an intermixture of rock and shallow soil, indicative of a superficial character. We meet with such characters in life. All that they do and all that they have is on the surface. Their pleasures and pursuits, their business and recreation, their religion (so-called), all alike bear the unmistakable stamp of shallowness.

"Many a clergyman turns to his records of confirmation classes of recent years to note with sorrow and wonder this name and that which represent persons he no longer sees in his congregation. The seed fell on stony soil in their hearts.

"'And some fell among thorns, and the thorns sprang up with it and choked it.' Here we have life yielding to the dissipating influences of its environment. The soil is rich enough and deep enough and soft enough, but it has no room for both grain and thorns. God or the world, but not God and the world. 'No man can serve two masters.' 'If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.'

"The three unfruitful kinds of ground do not indicate three types of character which must necessarily remain permanent, nor is the good ground good in itself. It is made good by the operation of the Word which, though here described as seed, is elsewhere represented as the dew and the rain, the hammer and fire, which soften, crush and purify the hearts of men.

"Travelers in Palestine are often struck with the barrenness of that land which is described in the Bible as 'a land flowing with milk and honey.' The most fertile of lands. But on inquiry we find that much of its fertility in olden times depended on irrigation.

"Remember that God's purpose for you takes into account your temperament and natural character and that he has a special type of sanctity for each of you, of which your natural gifts are the foundation.

"Brethren, turn to God, while yet there is time, quietly, naturally, honestly, 'with an honest and good heart, to keep the Word and bring forth fruit with patience.'"

Bandit Pair Robs Road Patrolman

Highwaymen Relieve Man of Shotgun After Enforced Ride.

Lewistown, Ill., Feb. 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—State Highway Patrolman James Bainter was today held up 3 miles south of Lewistown by two highwaymen. He saw an auto in the ditch and the two men working to get it out. He stopped his car and was disarmed. The sawed-off shotgun in his auto was taken.

Bainter was forced to enter his car with a bandit on each side and the party came to Lewistown in search of a wrecking crew. He was compelled to dicker for the wrecking car.

A wrecking car was sent out and the ditched car pulled back on the pavement. The two bandits paid, and, after offering Bainter a drink of liquor, pushed a $20 bill into his coat pocket and drove off. His car was left but his pistol and shotgun were confiscated.

CURB SHARE PRICES SLOWLY MOVING UP

Utilities Make Best Gains Late in Week; Trend Holds Well.

VACUUM OIL FEATURES

New York, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—The curb market has made a good start on the second month of the new year. Prices climbed slowly but surely last week, with only one or two interruptions, and a few stocks, favored by professional assistance, displayed considerable strength.

Although the basic business situation offered little stimulation for an advance in security prices, the progress toward a compromise on bonus legislation and the dimming prospects of an extra session of Congress helped financial sentiment. Another influence was the hearing of measures to restrict crude oil imports, which was reflected in a revival of interest in Petroleum shares, offsetting dividend reductions by three companies.

Utility shares made their best showing late in the week, although there was no pronounced bullish activity in the group. Professionals favored a number of the specialties, including Technicolor, which had an exceptionally brisk rally. There was also a wide upward move in Vacuum Oil, prompted by a belief that the Federal court decision on the Standard of New York merger was nearly ready. Mining stocks were somewhat affected by easing prices in the nonferrous metals, although Noranda rallied in later sessions.

The investment trust shares were quiet. Many of these issues are still selling below the assets values stated in the most recent reports, but some have reduced the spread. The increasing number of fixed trusts, it is said, has diverted attention from the general management type.

PLANE FINDS PARTYY MAROONED ON FLOE

tied and the second chapter was written into their minds with the recurring thought: "Will we be found?" Then, as the bitter cold of early morning seeped through the sweaters and clothing of the fishermen, came the chapter which might well have been the last of the story—a tale of slow freezing to death—had it not been for the blue-clad men of the United States Coast Guard and a miracle of modern science which enables men to lift themselves above the barriers of ice and earth.

Vivid Story Is Told.

Anthony Gutkowski, 28, of Lackawanna, one of the first brought ashore, told a vivid story of the long hours of waiting in the darkness for rescue.

He told of the vicious "crack" with which the ice floe parted from the main body and of the consternation with which the men learned they were cut off from safety.

"Everybody realized what had happened at about the same time," he said. "We knew we were in trouble. It was awful quiet. Nobody said anything. We could feel the ice moving and we just stood there and watched it move. The ice seemed to go faster as we went along. We thought we were moving toward Canada, and that would have been all right because we probably would have moved against ice strong enough to get us to shore without breaking up our own piece.

"The only thing we were worried about was that the wind might shift from east to southwest and send us in toward the American shore and crack us up there. If that had happened we would have been lost.

"As soon as we knew we were there to stay for a while we divided in groups of ten so as not to put too much strain on the ice where we were standing. The men took their pike poles and made tents out of them. Then we built bonfires near the tents.

"Nobody had much food and we were hungry, so some of the boys thought they'd try and catch some fish. They made holes in the ice and a couple of fellows were fishing most of the night. They got about six fish, a couple of perch and some bass.

"Six fish for twenty men isn't very much. Everybody was still hungry after eating them, but there wasn't much we could do about it.

"No one got much sleep. We were too worried. We just walked around or sat still, without saying much.

"When it began to get light we saw the wood was running low, so we collected enough to keep the fires going.

Plane Is Glad Sight.

"The happiest sight in my life was that airplane coming over us this morning. Everybody cheered and waved. The plane dropped us a note saying the Coast Guard was coming and we began to feel pretty good. When the plane returned with food we knew everything was coming out O. K."

While the blizzard howled, a 9-year-old boy, Elmer Schreiber, of East Hamburg, curled up on a sled in the lee of a crude windbreak—and slept. Elmer told reporters he wasn't a bit afraid. He cried once—because he was hungry. But when the rescued men reached solid ice tonight, he walked ashore between his father and another man.

Throughout that long night, the thoughts of 31-year-old Hank Willis, of Lackawanna, were not so much for himself as for his wife and son to whom she had given birth Friday night.

"How's my wife?" were the words with which he greeted friends who waited on shore. He was assured that both she and the baby were well.

NEGRO LODGE'S USE OF NAME AT ISSUE

Court Action to Determine Whether Order Has Exclusive Right to Title.

HEARING AT CHARLOTTE

The right of the "Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World" to the exclusive use of its name, as an international fraternal organization composed largely of colored American citizens, but having lodges in England, Liberia, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Cuba, Mexico and Canada, will be challenged Wednesday, according to a statement given out by grand lodge headquarters here, in the Circuit Court of Appeals at Charlotte, N. C.

James T. Carter, former grand treasurer, together with Dr. Leon Raid, Joseph R. Pollard and John B. Neblett, attempted last year to form another grand lodge of colored Elks in the State of Virginia, but were enjoined by the existing grand lodge, which is chartered here and in New Jersey. Judge Lawrence D. Groner refused to make the restraining order permanent, on the ground that the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, a white organization, having existed 35 years before the colored organization was formed, had an exclusive right to the name of "Elks," other descriptive words being immaterial.

Seek to Show Error.

The colored grand lodge was hampered in its presentation of its case by Perry W. Howard, grand legal advisor, before Judge Groner, because it had set up its domicile as Washington, D. C., in a recent New York case, and was unable to prevail in restraining a Virginia corporation of colored Elks at Richmond from setting up a grand lodge, when the principle of "diverse citizenship" was declared not applicable to a District of Columbia corporation. The grand lodge, however, was certified by the Secretary of State of New Jersey as a full-fledged corporation, chartered in that State.

Howard, together with William C. Hueston, assistant solicitor for the Postoffice Department, and T. Gillis Nutter, of Charleston, W. Va., will seek to show at Charlotte Wednesday that Judge Groner erred in failing to restrain Carter, who was not a stranger to the local corporation, but a member of it, and who had served as grand treasurer 15 years, submitting to its jurisdiction in Virginia and throughout the world.

Compromise Offered.

"It is a well-established fact," attorneys for the grand lodge state, "that members and subordinate branches, created and existing under and by virtue of authority of a centtfay governing body, can not question the validity of its incorporation or the right to the exclusive use of its name."

A recent conference between attorneys for the two corporations disclosed that the Virginia group was willing to compromise provided J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler for nine years, and a member of Columbia Lodge, of this city, could be eliminated as a candidate for reelection at Philadelphia next August. The grand legal advisor and colleagues refused this compromise.

change in the governmental administration in Palestine.

He made it plain that the Zionists want the Holy Land removed from under the influence of the British colonial office. This is believed to be in line with the view of one section of Zionists throughout the world, who want to see Palestine become a British dominion, it was said.

"As long as the general supervision and control of the Palestine administration is under the colonial office, Palestine will be treated as a colony," Mr. Szold declared.

Other Leaders Heard.

Others who took a leading part in the council meeting, which was attended by 150 leading Zionists throughout the United States, were Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue, New York City; Judge Julian W. Mack, of the United States Circuit Court; Louis Lipsky, president of the New York Zionist Region; Jacob de Haas, Abraham Goldberg and Emanuel Neumann, president of the Jewish National Fund of America.

These Jewish leaders also took part in the national conference sessions, which continued all yesterday, and culminated with a banquet last night.

Israel B. Brodie, of New York, chairman of the economic committee of the Zionist organization, announced the formation of mutual savings groups throughout the United States, which will raise funds to be invested in private economic undertakings in Palestine.

Centralization System Of Soviet Russia Praised

Praise for "the rock-ribbed, invincible proletarian government of Soviet Russia" as a notable instance of "centralization and discipline" was paid by Linn A. E. Gale, president of the Washington Open Forum, in its weekly meeting yesterday afternoon at 623 Louisiana avenue northwest.

He made the reference in lauding the Llano Cooperative Colony in New Llano, Vernon Parish, Louisiana, as "a living proof of the practicability of collectivism, a place where cooperative industry and agriculture have been successfully conducted for nearly a fifth of a century."

FOOTBALL ITEMS OF THE FUTURE.
(If the reforms just announced by President Gates of the University of Pennsylvania are generally adopted.)

ABOUT October 1: The professor in charge of classes in Advanced Jostling reports his students are coming along in good shape, all things considered. With the football season only ten days away, the professor has had the football squad in training nearly a week now.

"The boys seem fine," said the professor after scrimmage today. "There is still a tendency on their part to give too much thought to football and not enough to scholarship, but by the time that the big games roll around I hope to have them in such shape that they will realize that, after all, their showing on the gridiron is relatively unimportant."

"Big Ed" Muller, who has the makings of a great full back, is not in the best of shape, it is understood, due to too much worry over scholastic matters, but it is expected that he will prove a tower of strength in the back field if his mind is eased in this respect.

Princeton, N. J.—"We look for the most successful football season at Princeton in years," said a spokesman for the faculty today, "if we can only succeed in our efforts to keep the varsity eleven from taking the game seriously. So far we are quite confident. There isn't a man on the team who thinks touchdowns important. With the boys in that state of mind, we are delighted with the outlook."

The faculty would not disenss a rumor that "Red" Spiegel, mentioned as a possible All-American quarter back, had been dropped from the squad for reporting too early for practice.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—Dr. Knute Rockne, professor of scrimmages at Notre Dame, announced today that he would not call out football candidates for training until a day or two preceding the opening game.

"The trouble with college football," said the doctor, "is that the boys have put too much time into preparation. We have all been making the mistake of considering victory important. What does it matter as long as the boys are in there enjoying some good, clean fun in the open air?"

Dr. Rockne has thrown three of his most promising players off the squad for neglecting their English classes.

Asked if he would renew his contract at Notre Dame next year, Dr. Rockne said, "I am very happy here now. They let me eat at the Faculty Club with a lot of splendid professors and I go for long bicycle rides with the pedagogues daily."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Harvard's football players are holding football so lightly this year that Prof. Casey announced today that he was expecting a banner season on the gridiron. "There isn't a man on the team who wouldn't rather get a high mark in ancient languages than make a 70-yard run to a touchdown," he said. "That's what we call team spirit!"

It is understood that Prof. Casey, who gets $2,800 a year, has been guaranteed a raise of $50 next year if Harvard beats Yale three seasons in a row.

GLOOM ENCIRCLES CONGRESS IN INDIA

Situation Now Held Similar to Hectic Times Before London Session.

GANDHI IS DISAPPOINTED

Allahabad, India, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—A deep gloom encircled the headquarters of the National Congress here today as a result of the reply of Viceroy Lord Irwin to the recent letter of Mahatma Gandhi asking an investigation into what the Nationalist leader termed gross cruelty and repression by police in subduing those engaged in the present liberation movement.

Whatever faint hope there might have been for acceptance of Ramsay MacDonald's proposal for qualified Indian home rule is regarded now as gone forever.

Members of the work committee of congress, including Gandhi, profess to see in the viceroy's reply no evidence the government really desires to make peace with the congress except on its own arbitrary terms. The message of the viceroy is termed "curt and coldly official."

Expect Return to Jail.

The hopelessness of the situation may be gauged from the fact that many members of the working committee in conversation with the Associated Press correspondent frankly said they expect to be back in jail within a fortnight.

Gandhi himself is described as painfully disappointed and disillusioned by the viceroy's letter. The text of the correspondence between the Nationalist leader and the viceroy will be released in a few days. But because of the viceroy's blunt communication all hopes for peace have been abandoned by congressional leaders.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, who attended the recent round-table conference in London, had a four hours' talk with Gandhi and other members of the working committee todsy. So far as is known, Sapru failed to convince them they ought to accept England's latest offer.

Activities Will Increase.

Thus the congress situation remains exactly as it was before Gandhi and the other leaders were released from jail and, indeed, as far as the congress is concerned, much the same as it was before the round-table conference began.

Present indications point to an early resumption of the congress' activities throughout India in an intensified form.

"A sudden drastic change of heart on the part of the Delhi government will 'save the situation,'" a prominent congress leader told the Associated Press correspondent today. "We have ceased to expect either changes or miracles from the British authorities, because they are wholly devoid of imagination and incapable of judging the heart, mind and temper of the Indian masses who are behind the independence movement."

Drought Prevails, Despite Showers

Midwest Water Shortage Is Held Most Acute in 50 Years.

Chicago, Feb. 8 (A.P.).—Winter turned its coldest shoulder today on Midwest areas pleading for an end to the drought. Instead of more rain to supplement the little absorbed by thirsty fields Friday night, there were lower temperatures and clear skies.

There was snow blanketing the fields of North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and part of Iowa, but in those States the crops were not affected, as in southern Illinois and Missouri.

It is an emergency period for south Illinois. Observers have called this the worst water famine in 50 years. Crops have been endangered, and cities have turned to rationing what little water remains in their reservoirs. The unusually warm weather of normally frigid months, together with lack of snow and rainfall, have dried up streams and wells, making it necessary for many communities to prospect for new sources of water supply.

Y. M. C. A. Employe Buried.

Hampton T. Gaskins officiating. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rosetta G. Mason. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Today's Happenings

Thieves Get $35 in Gems.

James A. Miskell, of Kentucky avenue southeast, near C street, told police yesterday that thieves had stolen jewelry worth $35 from his home. Entrance was gained by the front door, which was not locked.
